MAVERICK'S NOTICE.

Samuel Maverick's "Briefe Discription of New England and the Severall Townes therein," written about 1660, and printed in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, vol. 1, Second Series, 1884-85, speaks of Thomas Joy's building on page 247 :

"At that time [1626-1633] all the Houses there, except three or four at New Plymouth and those which I had, could not be valued worth 200£, and now to behold the handsome Houses & Churches in so many Townes as I have named is a wonder. And the place in which Boston (the Metropolis) is seated, I knew then for some yeares to be a Swamp and Pound, now a great Towne, two Churches, a Gallant Statehouse & more to make it complete, than can be expected in a place so late a wilderness."

EMERSON'S ALLUSION.

Go cut down trees in the forest,
And trim the straightest boughs ;
Cut down trees in the forest,
And build me a wooden house.

Call the people together,
The young men and the sires,
The digger in the harvest field,
Hireling and him that hires ;

And here in a pine statehouse
They shall choose men to rule
In every needful faculty
In Church and State and school.

PREFACE.

As this volume will naturally be compared with other family histories which are the product of large expenditure applied to professional research, the editor cannot forbear to say a few words in explanation of its shortcomings.

This work marks only the second step toward an adequate genealogy of THOMAS JOY and his descendants. The Joy Family, by One of Them (Mrs. CORNELIA C. JOY-DYER), issued in 1876, marks the beginning, and her zeal and thoroughness have given an impulse to all later students of the family history. It remains for later investigators to trace the Old World ancestry of THOMAS JOY, and to fill up our imperfect sketch of his American descendants.

The present work originated in an effort of the editor to establish his own line of descent. This done, a record of all the descendants of his ancestor, SAMUEL,<sup>2</sup> was undertaken. The latter task was approaching completion, when it became known that a considerable body of genealogical notes relating to the descendants of SAMUEL's brothers, JOSEPH<sup>2</sup> and EPHRAIM,<sup>2</sup> had been collected by others, working independently, and was available for publication. It was decided accordingly to incorporate these materials in one volume. The consequence is that the work has gained in interest and value at the expense of uniformity of workmanship. While these irregularities might be condemned in an elaborate genealogy, we venture to hope that they will be overlooked in a portfolio of family papers. It is believed, moreover, that with all its incompleteness this record will be of assistance in enabling many JOYS not named in our lists to establish their descent from the emigrant THOMAS.

To all who have cooperated in this work the editor returns grateful appreciation, and especially to EDMUND STEELE JOY, Esq., of Newark, N. J., for the conception of combining the three lines in one volume, and for much of the energy and enthusiasm which has carried it through. While we have been in a real sense collaborators, it has fallen to him to prepare the sketch of the life of THOMAS JOY, which is prefixed to the genealogies in this volume, and which contributes so largely to its interest and value. In the collection and study of the materials for this sketch, Mr. JOY would acknowledge the substantial assistance of Mr. JOHN C. J. BROWN, of Boston, an antiquarian to whose information and advice the whole work is greatly indebted.

In conclusion the editor gives grateful acknowledgment to those who have so generously supplied the means for the publication of this volume, and whose patience he has tried so sorely: the heirs of JAMES F. JOY, of Detroit; the heirs of JOHN D. W. JOY, of Boston; FRED JOY, of Boston; WILLIAM F. JOY, of Boston; E. LUTHER JOY, of Newark, N. J.; HORATIO B. JOY, of Newark, N. J.; and JOY MORTON, of Chicago.

THOMAS JOY, COLONIST.

THE name of Joy has been borne with honorable distinction by families in England and Ireland for at least five centuries. There is reason to believe that the name was derived from the locality Jouy, in Normandy,* and may have reached England in the form "de Jouy." It has undergone many modifications, in some of which its identity disappears, as it passes from Joy to Jay through such forms as Joye, Joie, Jaie, Jaye, and even Gee. The earliest of the name in England of whom we have information is William, who was vicar of Tibenham, in Norfolk, in 1395. In 1441 one Thomas Joye was rector of Fritton, in the same shire. In the list of Irish Archbishops of Tuam we find William Joy in 1487. George Joye, a fellow of Peterhouse College, Cambridge (1517), was one of the most learned and devoted leaders of the Protestant Reformation in England, and his fame is associated with Tyndale's in the translation of the Bible into the English tongue. Among the English colonists of Ulster about 1597 was a Captain Thomas Joy, among whose descendants are Francis Joy, the pioneer paper maker of Ireland and founder of the Belfast News-letter; Robert Joy, the promoter of the Ulster cotton manufactures; and Baron Henry Joy, attorney-general, whose statue stands in the Hall of the Four Courts, Dublin. George W. Joy, artist and marksman, and Albert Bruce Joy, the sculptor, are of this branch, and the roll of English painters includes the names of three other Joys of considerable merit.† Norfolk County has been for five hundred years the

† The notices of unidentified Joys in America previous to the 18th century are as follows:

In 1536 a Mr. Joy, "afterward a gentleman of the King's Chapel," embarked from England with Hore and others in the tall ships "Trinity" and "Minion" for the northeastern parts of America.

In 1623 a William Joy, with wife Abigail, was at Elizabeth City, Va.

In 1635 a Thomas Joy, age 25, sailed from Gravesend for Virginia in the ship "Constance," Clement Campion, master.

In 1641 Richard Joy, carpenter, with son near manhood, was at Trelawny's Patent (Me.). See Trelawny Papers, Coll. Me. Hist. Soc.

In 1643 William Joy sold land on Long Island in Boston Harbor. John Gallop also owned land on this island.

In 1644 Governor Berkeley, of Virginia, wrote to New England concerning one Walter Joy.

seat of a family of Joy (now Jay). John Jaye (1563-1619), of this line, lord of the manor of Holverston, lying between Hillington and Yelverton, received a grant of arms in 1601, as follows: "GU. ON A BEND ENG. AR. THREE ROSES OF THE FIELD, seeded. Crest: an Otter pass. ppr." Those who have given most studious consideration to the ancestry of the American colonist are of the opinion that he was of this Norfolk stock.

The earliest mention of Thomas Joy, the emigrant ancestor of most of the Joy families in America, is found in the records of the town of Boston, in New England, when "on the 20th of the 12th moneth, called February, 1636" (Feb. 20, 1637, N. S.), leave was given Thomas Joy "to buye a peece of ground of our brother Robert Turner, and to have it upon the usuall Condition of inoffensive Carryage." Of his birth and early life nothing is known. It is probable that he was born about 1610 in County Norfolk, in England, and that he came to America in that first flood of colonization which in eleven years (1629-1640) brought more than 25,000 souls to found a new English nation on the shores of the North Atlantic. He may have been the "Thomas Joy, age 25," who sailed from Gravesend for America in 1635, in the "Constance."*

Thomas Joy was by occupation a builder, [house-carpenter, millwright,] and, indeed, architect, a lucrative employment in a new country; but whether he followed that vocation in England, or adopted it †

In 1650 Walter Joy was at Milford, Conn. In the same year Walter Joy witnessed a deed in York Co., Maine.

In 1652 Deborah, aged 27, wife of Walter Joy, was in Essex Co., Mass. See N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, 1878, p. 341.

Sarah Gaskins, and had David, b. 1662; Anna, b. 1663; Sara, b. 1666 (m. — Dotteridge); Peter, b. 1669; William, b. 1675 (was "shipwright," and d. 1699); Samuel, b. 1678. From Samuel, of this family, the Joys of Nantucket trace their descent. Several Joy families were in Salem toward the end of the 18th century.

In 1668 Thomas Joy, of Kingstown, R. I., signed a petition with men of Wickford. Austin (Gen. Dict. of R. I.) supposes that he was husband of the wid. Dorothy, whose death is in the Newport Quaker records. She d. Aug. 18, 1676. Her son George d. Aug. 15, 1676.

About 1670 Jacob Joy, blacksmith, with bro. Joseph, settled at Fairfield, Conn. Jacob removed to Killingworth, Conn., and m., 1672, Mrs. Elizabeth (Wellman) Spencer. Had children: Deborah, 1673; Jacob, 1675; Walter, 1677; Mary, 1680.

In 1674 an Isaac Joy, "probably transient," d. at Guilford, Conn.

In 1678, 29 July, Boston Town Records, there is mention of "George Joy," with an allusion to Bacon's Rebellion in Virginia.

* The failure of Mrs. Joy-Dyer's effort to trace the birth of Thomas to the English Hingham was due, perhaps, to the absence of any local parish records antedating 1683. He was doubtless the "Thomas Joy, ae. 54, in 1665," mentioned in the list of early settlers of Essex and Old Norfolk Counties. N. E. Hist. Gen. Register, vol. vi (1852), p. 345.

† See Palfrey, History of New England, vol. 1, p. 383.

after settlement here cannot be said. Whatever his resources may have been, paternal or acquired, he was soon able to marry the daughter of a well-known townsman, and purchase desirable lands on which to found a homestead of his own.

Joan Gallop, who by her marriage with Thomas Joy in 1637 became the mother of the American Joys, was the daughter of John and Christabel Gallop,* of Boston. Her father, "Capt. John Gallop, the elder," had come over in 1630 in the "Mary and John." He was a skillful pilot and Indian trader, and his services were accounted of great value to the colony. His wife and daughter remained behind in England, apparently for dread of the perils of the sea, and on July 4, 1632, Governor Winthrop wrote concerning them to the Rev. John White, the Puritan rector of Trinity Church, Dorchester, Eng.:

I have much difficultye to keepe John Gallop here by reason of his wife will not come. I marvayle at the woman's weaknesse. I pray persuade and further her coming by all means. If she will come let her have the remainder of his wages; if not, let it be bestowed to bring over his children, for so he desired. It would be about £40 losse to him to come for her.

Your assured in the Lord's worke,

J. WINTHROP.

Mr. White's persuasion seems to have conquered goodwife Gallop's qualms, for in June, 1634, Christabel Gallop's name was enrolled as a member of the First Church in Boston, to which her husband also belonged. It is believed that his family came in the "Griffin," in September, 1633, which also brought the two Puritan divines, John Cotton and Thomas Hooker, and which Gallop himself piloted to her anchorage before the little town.

John Gallop's lands included a house and lot in the most desirable part of Boston, with harbor islands, one of which still bears his name. His trading shallop was the principal means of communication between the Bay Colony and the settlements on Narragansett Bay and Long Island Sound, and on one occasion of considerable distress, when the little vessel, which had been anxiously awaited, was at length sighted, Roger Williams is said to have exclaimed, "God be praised, John Gallop has arrived!" The hardy pilot was a man of dauntless courage. In July, 1636, he attacked the murderers of his friend, John Oldham, off Block Island, and with the help of his two young sons and one other man dispatched or captured fourteen Indians. He served in the fierce campaign which grew out of this incident. His son, another John, who married Hannah Lake, a niece of the younger Winthrop, was a man of his father's mettle, and was one of the six captains slain in the great swamp fight in the Narragansett country in 1675. John Gallop, Sr., died January 11, 1650, and his wife Christabel on the "27-7 mo., 1655." By the will* of each the children of their only daughter, Joan Joy, received bequests.

* The Gallops trace descent from one John "Gollop," who "came from the north of England in 1465," and settled in Dorsetshire. Our ancestor Joan (also "Joane" and "Johanna") was born at Mosterne, in that county. See The Genealogical History of the Gallup Family in the U. S., by John D. Gallup, Agawam, Mass., 1893.

The Book of Possessions, that list of early Boston lands and land-owners which Bostonians are fond of calling their "Doomsday Book," describes two lots belonging to Thomas Joy, and from the town records, maps, and deeds his holdings and transfers of real estate appear to have been considerable. He was early the possessor of three several tracts of land on the east side of the peninsula. Here was the "Great Cove," in the bight of which was Bendall's Dock, or the Town Dock, the principal lading place for vessels, and the center of the town's merchandizing. Dr. Shurtleff † says that these "cove lots" were granted to "the principal men of the town," and gives a list of eighteen owners of these "meersteads" in the order of their possessions, beginning at the north. Thomas Joy's is the second name, and the sixth is that of his father-in-law, John Gallop. On Thomas Joy's half acre by the sea were two houses, both of which he doubtless built and in one of which he dwelt. His acre of ground farther inland became in after years the "court end" of the town. The mansions of Governor Hutchinson and Sir Charles Henry Frankland, and the dwelling of Paul Revere were built upon it, and on its border was the historic meetinghouse of Increase and Cotton Mather. ‡ A third plot, perhaps the most valuable of all, was in Bendall's Cove, not far from and perhaps including the sites of Faneuil Hall and the "old feather store."

The printed records of Boston contain several allusions to these properties. In February, 1636-37, the town gave the permission to Thomas Joy, already quoted, to purchase ground of Robert Turner. At a town meeting in 1642 "there is liberty granted Thomas Joy, Carpenter, to set up an howse over his sellar by the waterside in the common way by his dwelling howse in the milfield, leaving, and from time to time keeping open, a passage of 6 foot in breadth between howse and howse.* Perhaps he was slow in acting on this permission, for in 1644 he was ordered, under penalty, to make a safe passage over "his Sellar in the high way, by the water side, in the millfeild," but soon, because of his continued neglect of the town's order, the constables were "appointed to require and receive of Thomas Joy, or to levy by distresse upon his goods 20s. for the townes Use." In 1665 † "Itt is ordered that Thomas Jay In consideration of a peice ground butting vpon the new metting house to the North as his fence now stands, the s<sup>d</sup> Thomas Jay is freed from all raites during his & wife naturall life & 40s. in siluer besides." In 1676, ‡ it being desirable to widen the streets in the north part of the town which had recently been swept by fire, "ye selectmen" made the "ensuing direction:"

That the west side of the streete from Maj<sup>r</sup> Thos Clarkes bricke wall run to a stake neere the corner of Thomas Joys land in that lane w<sup>ch</sup> leads to the place of y<sup>e</sup> Meeting-house & from that stake along the s<sup>d</sup> west side of the way as now staked out to the corner of Edmond Mountforts foundation, on y<sup>e</sup> same side of y<sup>e</sup> way. And from the corner of Mr. Humphrey Warrens house on the East side of the way to a stake in the land of Dan<sup>l</sup> Turine Jun<sup>r</sup> ouer against y<sup>t</sup> at Thomas Joys corner, where the streete is to be 22 foote in breadth & soe all alonge the streete to Edmond Mountforts 2 houses on each side the way The line to run from y<sup>e</sup> stake at Dan<sup>l</sup> Turines to another at Henery Cooleys, from thence to Edmond Mountforts on the East & soe to the Corner of Peter Gees house, as now staked out.

On this occasion Thomas Joy had some just cause of difference with the selectmen "relateinge to satisfaction y<sup>t</sup> he required for inlarginge the streete where his houses were laid wast by fire." § The referees (two men of Hingham and three of Boston) to whom the dispute was committed found,

Up to the year 1646 Thomas Joy's life in New England was that of a successful man. His increasing possessions bear witness to his prosperity in business. He was happily married, and four little sons already gladdened his fatherly heart. But at this juncture his spirit of independence brought him into violent collision with the established authorities of the colony, with results painful to his person and hazardous to his fortunes.

The political agitation in which Thomas Joy became involved was the famous "Dr. Child's Memorial," so named from the prominence of one Dr. Robert Child in its origination and support. It was a protest against certain illiberal customs of the period and particularly against the narrow policy of the colonial government which since 1631 had restricted the right of suffrage to the members of the local Puritan churches—thus excluding more than three fourths of the adult male population from any participation in public affairs.* The original petition† was signed by Robert Child, Thomas Burton, John Smith, Thomas Fowle, David Yale, Samuel Maverick, and John Dand. Thomas Joy entered ardently into the plea for enlarged liberty and supported the movement as a representative of the non-freemen. The signers to the frank remonstrance were not numerous, and their prayer was rudely denied by Winthrop and his associates. When it became known that the petitioners intended to renew their claims before the British Parliament, the magistrates put forth all their energy to prevent it. The night before the departure of the ship which was to carry the documents to England the authorities raided the study of Mr. Dand, where they found evidence which led to the arrest of several persons. The petition itself was safely conveyed to London, where it became the subject of a pamphlet battle, which was soon forgotten in the tumult of the Civil War. The petitioners did not fare so well. Some were thrown into prison, others were heavily fined, and most of them left the colony forever.‡ For our account of Thomas Joy's part

† This interesting document is printed in the Appendix.

‡ All the active participants in this movement for reform left the colony, except Samuel Maverick and Thomas Joy, and are said to have returned to England. See Savage's Genealogical Dictionary. David Yale had formerly resided in the New Haven Colony, and was a stepson of Governor Theophilus Eaton. His son Elihu, born in Boston, April 5, 1649, became a wealthy merchant and gave eight hundred pounds to the college at New Haven, thus becoming the founder of Yale University. Though the papers were widely circulated the known signers of the "remonstrance and petition" of 1646 are very

in the affair we must go to the bitter enemy of the petitioners, Governor Winthrop, whose Journal or "History of New England" gives a lengthy recital of the case.

According to Winthrop, Thomas Joy was concerned in getting "hands" to the petition which was to be sent to England, and when search was made of Mr. Dand's study, he "began to be very busy" and challenged the authority of the marshal. He was arrested for this and "kept in irons four or five days," when he submitted and was released on bail.*

Historians differ in their views of this agitation for which our ancestor suffered. It has been characterized as a cabal for the establishment of Presbyterianism, and even as an attempt to foist upon the new colony the forms and worship of the Church of England.† To the candid observer, however, uninfluenced by Winthrop and his advisers, the petitioners stand for liberality and progress, while the authorities are convicted of intolerance and a tyrannous abuse of power. ‡ The spirit

few. Winthrop says: "We could hear but of twenty-five to the chief petition." Unfortunately their names were not preserved. See Winthrop's History of New England, vol. ii, p. 294. There were two petitions found in Dand's study. One, on behalf of the signers above named, sought redress in specified particulars, and was accompanied by twenty-three queries which related chiefly to "the validity of our patent" and the powers of the courts and churches. "The other was from some non-freemen" in which they petition "for liberty of conscience," etc., and "for a general governor," etc. Winthrop's History of New England, vol. ii, pp. 293, 294.

* "There was also one Thomas Joy, a young fellow, a carpenter, whom they had employed to get hands to the petition. He began to be very busy and would know of the marshal when he went to search Dand's study, if his warrant were in the King's name, etc. He was laid hold on and kept in irons about four or five days, and then he humbled himself, confessed what he knew, and blamed himself for meddling in matters belonging not to him, and blessed God for those irons upon his legs, hoping they should do him good while he lived. So he was let out upon reasonable bail." Winthrop's History of New England, vol. ii, p. 294. Felt, in the Ecclesiastical History of New England, mentions, on page 592, "A young man, Thomas Joy, who had circulated the petition for the non-freemen." Drake, in The History and Antiquities of Boston, on page 297, says: "Thomas Joy, a young carpenter, for some kind offences to the prisoners . . . was kept in irons four or five days, which was sufficient to extort a confession of wrong on his part as it allowed him to return to the care of his family upon reasonable bail. Thus arbitrary power shows its strength and importance when those in the more humble walks of life are accidentally or otherwise thrown within its insolent grasp." Aaron Hobart, in a note to his History of Abington, Mass. (1839), says, p. 22, Thomas Joy was "put in irons (a sample of the tyranny of those times) for merely circulating a remonstrance to the government in England against certain obnoxious proceedings of the government in Boston." Savage, in Gen. Dict. of N. E., says in vol. ii, p. 573, Thomas Joy was arrested "as a too ardent lover of liberty, yet is called 'a young fellow' by Governor Winthrop." Though Joy was at this time thirty-five years of age Winthrop was nearly sixty, a fact which may readily account for his use of the term "a young fellow."

† Historians of the filio-pietistic school generally take this view of the agitation. See Massachusetts: Its Historians and Its History, by C. F. Adams, p. 60.

‡ An adequate treatment of this event has not yet been made by any historian, and it is therefore difficult properly to characterize the episode. It was in all probability an honest effort at reform through the method of petition by men who believed that their rights as freeborn English subjects were infringed by the authorities of the colony. Thomas Joy represented the non-freemen, and circulated the petition in their behalf and doubtless signed it. Their prayer to the General Court of the Colony was which condemned Thomas Joy to imprisonment until his sense of duty to his family induced him to make his peace with the authorities was the same as that which whipped the Quakers through the Massachusetts villages at the cart's tail and hunted Roger Williams out of the colony in the depths of a northern winter.

Dr. Child and his fellow-signers were mostly gentlemen of education and means, as well as mature years, fully as able to endure political disfavor as the young and high-spirited builder, who had given such hostages to fortune.* Where they no longer found residence endurable, Thomas Joy could scarcely expect to prosper under the frowns of the authorities. It is not surprising to learn that shortly after his political trouble, which had doubtless impaired his business prospects, he exchanged a part of his possessions in Boston for property in Hingham, a village of emigrants from Hingham in County Norfolk, England, who had settled about 1635 on the shores of the bay a dozen miles southeast of Boston. Thither in the spring of 1648 he removed with his family, and there he established permanent interests although his connection with Boston was actively maintained.

Savage significantly remarks in a note to his edition of Winthrop's Journal,† that Joy removed to Hingham, "where he could enjoy more sympathy of neighbors." This bond was perhaps twofold. In the first place it is believed that Thomas was himself a native of Norfolk, and in the second place the Hingham folk were noted for their tolerance in religious matters and their independence in politics. So recently as 1645 they had come into bitter controversy with the General Court of the colony over the election of a captain of the local militia company. The government finally carried its point, and inflicted heavy fines upon the chief men of Hingham, including their minister, Rev. Peter Hobart. Hobart's independence was notorious, and on one occasion when he had been engaged to preach in Boston for the extension of the suffrage to their class, which constituted about three fourths of the adult male population, and in the memorial to the British Parliament they ask for a General Governor of all the colonies. It would seem, therefore, that Thomas Joy was interested simply in the political phase of the agitation, and was more opposed to the course pursued by the magistrates than to the puritanism of the churches, though in a government so largely theocratic such a distinction may be hard to draw. The petition was circulated in Connecticut, Plymouth, and New Haven, as well as Massachusetts, and copies were found even in "the Dutch plantations, Virginia, and the Bermudas." For interesting and instructive suggestions in regard to this event see Three Episodes of Massachusetts History, pp. 333, 349, 574, by C. F. Adams, and also Massachusetts: Its Historians and Its History, p. 60, by the same author.

the magistrate "sent to him to forbear," "that his spirit had been discovered to be adverse to our ecclesiastical and civil government and he was a bold man and would speak his mind."* Rev. Mr. Hobart was greatly beloved by his people. He had led them into the New World for conscience' sake, and he ministered among them for more than forty years. To his benign influence we may attribute the fact that not a single instance of religious persecution marred the early history of this ancient town. In Peter Hobart's parish Thomas Joy now made his home.†

In 1643 the town of Hingham had granted to Bozoan Allen and Anthony Eames the privilege of erecting a gristmill, and we are told that "Thomas Joy came to Hingham about 1646 to erect or enlarge a gristmill at the town cove and also to establish a sawmill in the same locality, perhaps adjoining the former."‡ Real estate records seem to prove that Joy obtained these mill privileges from Bozoan Allen in exchange for Boston property. It is interesting to note that a tide mill§ is still in operation at the entrance of the cove and local antiquarians assert that the logs and beams near by which are laid bare at the ebb are relics of the foundation of the original sawmill erected and owned by Thomas Joy two hundred and fifty years ago.

There is impressive evidence that for several years after his removal to Hingham it cost Thomas Joy a hard struggle to support his rapidly increasing family and save what property he had acquired. The little hamlet of fishermen and farmers afforded no such opportunity as the enterprising builder had enjoyed in the busy capital, and he found himself in straits which compelled him to pledge some of his property for means by which to bridge over this period of adversity. Moreover, continued persecution by the colonial authorities and the fear of fines and confiscation finally led him to place his entire estate in the hands of trustees for the protection of his family. || The records help us to trace his doings in this critical period. In 1648 ¶ "Thomas Joy,

|| In a note to Winthrop's History of New England on page *284, Savage refers to the "little money in the public chest," and he adds, "The country was besides so poor [1646] that no tax was assessed for the year, and I regret the deficiency the more, since it served perhaps to inflame the fines which tyrannical rulers inflicted on such as differed from them but slightly in their notions of policy."

This was doubtless a Yankee "swap" for "the grist mill with the dams" and "the dwelling house and the land"* in Hingham, which Allen had conveyed to him.

In 1648† "Thomas Joy, of Hingham," acknowledges his indebtedness to Thomas Savage, of Boston, "in the summe of sixteene pounds foure shillings niene pence [ ] to be paid in good & Merchantable porke at 3<sup>d</sup> p pound or in merchantable wheat [ ] at foure shillings six pence p bushell or in money" "& for p formance" mortgages his "house scituat neere the new meeting house in Boston wth the garden & ground thereto belonging." John Dand, who witnessed this document, was a principal signer of the petition of 1646. He had been a clerk in the prothonotary's office and probably drew the deed. In the next year* Joy confirmed this deed of trust, revoking "the reservation of dyet & lodging for him selfe," and further binding himself to pay to Edmund Jackson the "summe of ten pounds towards the repaireing of the sd mill."

In this same year † the General Court granted the petition of Edmund Jackson and Mehitabel [Christabel (?)] Gallop for power to sell all or part of the mill in Hingham for the use and behoof of the wife and children of Thomas Joy, "who are now in great want," and soon afterward Edmund Jackson conveys, by virtue of that power, one fourth part of the mill and dam to Ambrose Leach. ‡

In 1652 § Jackson was discharged from his trusteeship, the feoffment being transferred to the County Court, the use remaining in the wife and children according to the original deed.

Thomas Joy's active participation in the business and social affairs of the capital was evidently fully resumed by the year 1656, but it is proper to mention in this connection several transactions of a later date in which he and his wife unite to convey portions of the land in Boston. As the deeds make no mention of encumbrances and were made in a season of much prosperity, they show the success with which his property was held until a judicious time for sale. Several of his transfers were not recorded. Twenty acres "upon y<sup>e</sup> * highwaye that goeth to Marblehead" were conveyed in 1661 by "Thomas Joy of Boston," to Captain Thomas Marshall, of Lynn, according to a copy of a deed in the Suffolk Court Files. But the first recorded conveyance of Boston land was in 1664,† when "Thomas Joy of Boston" granted to Thomas Walker, a brickmaker, for "Sixty & five pounds by the value thereof in money & other Currant pay in New England," "a Peece or Parcell of land" which "butteth on the highway South Easterly & from thence to runn downe towards the Pond North Westerly," "wth the frame of an house on Par<sup>t</sup> of the sajd land."

In 1669‡ "Thomas Joy of Boston," for "one hundred Pounds of Currant money," grants to Richard Way "a pcell of Land with the frame of an howse" and "five foott of Ground" extending "from the high way comonly called the Streete," southerly to "the Sea or harbor."

In 1671§ "Thomas Joy of Hingham" for one hundred pounds conveys to Abraham Adams, a cooper, the "cellars Shops &c with the Land whereon they Stand," being in "bredth twenty Seaven foot," and extending from the "Street Northw<sup>est</sup>" to "Low water marke Southeast." In 1672|| "Thomas Joy of Hingham" for one hundred and fourteen pounds conveys to Daniel Turein, Jr., a blacksmith, that part of his property which was the remainder of the "land and housing formerly Sould unto Abraham Adams."

In 1677¶ "Thomas Joy of Hingham" grants to Daniel Turill [Turein] for the sum of one hundred and twenty-eight pounds two other tracts "neare the new meeting howse at the northern end of Boston," twenty-four and fifty feet "in the front" respectively, bounded on the south by the "Streete lately ordered by the selectmen of Boston."

It is noteworthy that in these documents Thomas Joy is quite as frequently "of Boston" as "of Hingham."** He had never wholly relinquished his business interests in the former place. It was the home of his wife's kinsfolk, and her later children, born in Hingham, were religiously taken to Boston to receive baptism in the First Church, the church of their grandsire, John Gallop, and Grandmother Christabel. His relations with Boston increased as the lapse of years healed the political wounds and liberalized the views of the clergy. Winthrop died in 1649, and the Rev. John Cotton in 1652. In 1657* the ministers of the colony pronounced for religious liberties hardly less than those which had seemed revolutionary scarcely ten years before. It was in this altered state of public opinion that the man who had left the town in 1648 under a cloud of popular suspicion returned to find himself again in high favor among his former friends and townsmen and about to be intrusted with the execution of the most important public work yet undertaken in New England. The Boston record of 1659, which tells us that he was appointed with two others to "survey the mill bridge whether the foundation and timber worke bee firme," † goes to show the esteem in which he was held as a mechanic, and we have detailed accounts of one achievement which not only marks him as the master builder of the colony, but links his name forever with an interesting and historic edifice, the first Town House of Boston.

Captain Robert Keayne, a public-spirited citizen of Boston, dying in 1656, made provision in his will for the construction of a market place and conduit, "with some convenient roome or too for the courts to meete in both in Winter & Sumer, & so for the Townesmen & comiss<sup>rs</sup> of the Towne . . . in the same building or the like," besides a "convenient roome for a Library, & a gallery or some other handsome roome for the Elders to meete in; . . . also a roome for an Armory and a place for merchants." For the erection of this important public edifice, Captain Keayne left £300, which the townspeople more than doubled by subscription. On August 1, 1657, the town's building committee gave the contract to Thomas Joy and Bartholomew Bernad. They were to erect "a very substantiall and Comely building . . . sixty-one foot in Length and thirty-six foot in Breadth from outside to outside, set upon twenty-one Pillers of full ten foot high between Pedestall & Capital," "the wholl Building to Jetty over three foot without the Pillers everie way." There was also to be a "walke upon the Top fourteen or 15 foot wide with two turrets, & turned Balasters and railes round about the walke according to A modell or draught Presented to us by the s<sup>d</sup> Tho: Joy." In addition there were to be "two pair halfe paced staires & turned staires up into the walke." Floors, gutters, windows, and mantelpieces were specified in detail, and the whole edifice was to be erected on the 30th of June next ensuing, "and Covered and shingled within six weekes after that."*

The site of this structure, which sheltered so many public interests, was in the open space at the head of what is now State Street. The building was completed and occupied in 1658, though the final payments on the contract were not made until two years later, as appears from an entry in the Town Record, January 28, 1660-1.

In reference to the accounts of Tho. Joy and partner for the building of the towne house, stayre cases and Conduit, and the compleating of the said worke, Itt is ordered that the Treasurer shall pay to the said Joy sixe hundred and eighty pounds (deducting what hath beene already paid) outt of the Treasury or next Towne rate; whereby all contracts made with the said Joy are performed as per his owne hand to a writing of this date.†

This first capitol of Massachusetts stood for a half century. Joselyn, the English traveler, speaks of it as a "Town House built on pillars where the merchants may confer: In the chamber above they keep their monthly courts." It was destroyed by fire in 1711, and on its site was erected the brick building which, as the Old State House, is now one of the most venerated monuments of colonial Boston.

* As the building was raised on pillars, part of the lower floor was partitioned off for shops, the rest being left open for a market place or "market stead." According to the town records, it appears that in 1664 a bell was ordered to be rung every working day at eleven o'clock to give notice of the assembling there for one hour of merchants and strangers. In 1683 it was voted that a note set up under the Town House upon one of the pillars, concerning the price of wheat, should be a sufficient notice to the bakers "to size their bread by according to law." Up stairs there were three large rooms and several smaller anterooms. The structure was the scene of many stirring events. It is the "pine statehouse" of Emerson's "Boston Hymn," and the "Town Hall" of Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter." Whittier laid the scene of "The King's Missive" in its council chamber. Mr. George A. Clough, formerly city architect of Boston, has made for this volume (see frontispiece) a drawing showing the edifice restored in accordance with the contracts and contemporary descriptions. See also Boston Town Records, and the Old State House Memorial (3d Ed., Boston), 1885. The original contract is preserved by the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston. See Appendix.

THE TOWN HOUSE AGREEMENT.

From the original document presented to the Bostonian Society by J. C. J. Brown, Esq.

The armory, for which provision was made in the public building, was for the use of the artillery company, of which Captain Keayne was the founder and first commander. It was organized in 1637, and is still in existence, being now known far and wide as "The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company." The roll of its members for more than two and a half centuries contains some of the most worthy and distinguished names in the history of Boston.* It is an evidence of a more liberal era in the colony, when we find that in 1658 Thomas Joy was enrolled as a member of the organization, and among those who joined in the same year appears the name of his old companion in political persecution, Samuel Maverick.†

It appears by the colony records that on October 21, 1663, the General Court "remitted £30 of Thomas Joy's fine, and ordered the treasurer to repay it." What fine this was, the injustice of which is thus tardily acknowledged, is not certainly known. We do know, however, that several men were fined at one time £30 each for complicity in the affair of the petition.‡ Whether Thomas Joy was fined on this occasion the records fail to state, but it is at least pleasant to believe that in his case the old political score was thus wiped out. On May 3, 1665,§ the name of Thomas Joy appears in a list of "ye severall psons returned by certificats from the severall ministers and selectmen" who were "by public suffrage of both magis<sup>ts</sup> & Deputies admitted to freedome & tooke their oathes accordingly." This "freedome" included all the rights of citizenship, and was still granted only to church members|| and men approved by the religious and

|| Up to 1674 the court lists give the names of 2,527 persons who had become freemen of the colony. It is generally asserted that church membership continued to be a requisite for the suffrage until the downfall of the colony charter in 1684, and even later. But on August 3, 1664, the General Court passed a law extending the elective franchise to non-freemen. The selection was, however, left in the hands of ministers, selectmen, and the General Court, and the candidates for "admittance to the freedom of this commonwealth" had to be settled inhabitants "twenty-four years of age," "orthodox in religion," and "freeholder (ratable for ten shillings)." The law was a concession to the demands of the king made in a letter dated June 28, 1662, and was passed in the presence in Boston of four royal commissioners whom he had sent to effect certain reforms. One of them was Samuel Maverick. One of the amendments demanded by the royal commissioners was that all writs and processes should thereafter be issued "in the King's name." See Palfrey, History of New England, vol. ii, pp. 587 and 523; The Puritan Age in Massachusetts, by Ellis, pp. 505-515; and Massachusetts Colony Records, vol. iv, part ii, pp. 117, 118. The oath of allegiance in the colony was changed by order of the king, April secular authorities, a law of the previous year having granted this extension of the right of suffrage. And so it came about that our ancestor lived to see the virtual triumph of the cause in which he had hazarded his fortunes, and to enjoy in his closing years not only the material prosperity which his honesty and industry had won, but the honor which is the due reward of courageous adherence to sincere and lofty convictions. By becoming a "freeman" he entered into full accord with the established order of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and gave a satisfactory completeness to a life otherwise reasonably full of creditable attainment.

A somewhat obscure but highly interesting episode in Thomas Joy's later life is suggested by three deeds in the Suffolk Records by which he received title to lands from several Indian sachems. The first was in 1661,* when "John Indian Sagamore," of a place on the "Kennebecke River called the High Head on the westerly side of the bay Called merry meeting Bay" for a "valluable Sume" conveyed to Thomas Ashley † and Thomas Joy of Boston land on the east side of the Kennebec river "from the point called Reskkegan to Cape Saugs wth the meadow Grounds" extending "to the River called Aquaquamset" on the one side, and "to Cape Saugs River" on the other, together with the island "known by the name of Blacke Island."

The other deeds were executed June 27, 1668. One ‡ was from "Sagamore Josiah Wampetuck & George Wampe of Mattakecis Indian plantation" who "in Consideration of the great love, good will & re-

† Rev. Henry O. Thayer, a Maine antiquary who has located this purchase, says: "The tract specified comprises the well-known Thwing's Point. I think the northern bound is Eastern River or Aquoquamsett, but the southern limit is less clearly defined. Precisely what was intended by 'Cape Saugs' or 'Raskegan' I will not determine. . . . Ashley lived on Thwing's Point and there (1654) the Plymouth Colony people with Thomas Prince, C. Southworth &c. set up the first form of government. The 'High Head,' on the west where the Sagamore lived, I am not sure about, but I believe it was the point on the Bay by Muddy River."

Josiah Wampetuck was the son of Chicatabot, a "great chief" of the Massachusetts tribe. Chicatabot is often mentioned by Winthrop and other historians. He was a picturesque figure among the early settlers, was generally friendly to the whites, lived at Neponset, and died in 1633. His grandson, Charles Josiah Wampetuck, son of Josiah Wampetuck, made a deed in 1684-85 confirming the title to the Boston Peninsula, originally given by his grandsire. See Winthrop's History of New England, vol. i, *49, note, *53, *56, *61, etc. Memorial History of Boston, Ed. by Winsor, vol. i, p. 250; see also Book of the Indians of North America (Boston, 1837), by Samuel G. spect" they bore and also "the many Curtesies" received from their "Loving freinds Thomas Joy and Josiah Hubart" conveyed three and one half square miles situated "betweene two Rivers in the Nipmug Country & Commonly knowne & called by the Indians thereabouts by the name of Tohkecommunwackuck,"* excepting one hundred acres "uppon the hill or old planting Ground by the Indians called Tohke-com-mum-wackake." The other † was from Sagamore Josiah Wampetuck who, for the same consideration as the above, conveyed to Joy land "wthin the lyne of the Collony of new Plymouth" which was "in length three miles & in breadth one mile & a one fourth part of a mile." This latter tract he was compelled to surrender (1674), such unauthorized purchase of lands from the Indians being at that time contrary to the laws of the Plymouth Colony.‡ These deeds raise many interesting speculations concerning our ancestor, but we know nothing further of the transactions. Whether he ever visited his lands in Maine (near the site of the present city of Bath) we cannot say, and how these Indian grants passed out of his possession will probably never be known. No sale is recorded, and they are not mentioned in the inventory of his property at his death. These deeds constitute the sole evidence of Joy's relations with the Indians, and their patent tone of friendliness and peace indicates a cordial intercourse with the natives, which is in cheerful contrast with the hostile attitude of many settlers, and particularly with the bloody experiences of the warlike Gallops.

Between 1672 and 1677 Thomas Joy was concerned in several lawsuits in Boston. In the former year Richard Wharton, agent of Robert Bendish & Co., sued Captain William Hudson and Thomas Joy for £75 11s. 11d. § The claim was apparently just, for the defendants confessed judgment. In the settlement Wharton was placed in possession of land belonging to Joy about 40 feet square "fronting upon the Streete that lies before the Meeting House." As the land was worth 50s. per foot Wharton was required to pay Joy money above the amount of the judgment, while Joy was ordered to remove the "frame" (house) which stood on the lot.

While this suit was in progress, John Woodmancy, a merchant of Boston, and Thomas Joy had a falling out over business dealings. The former claimed £378 7s. 8d. for merchandise furnished to Joy or upon his order, and exhibited an itemized account which ran from 1659 to the date of the suit.* Joy's counterclaim amounted to £385 2s. 8d. for services and building materials.† The litigation extended from 1672 to 1675, when the matter was amicably adjusted out of court.‡ The case is interesting as exhibiting the common use of "store-orders" in lieu of cash, and in showing the purchases which our ancestor made for his business and household. Incidentally it discloses the facts that Thomas Joy built a part of a frame of a dwelling for Captain Oliver, and "the great wharfe at Charlestowne" for Mr. Davison.

The corn mill at Hingham figures in another lawsuit of the same period. When Richard Church's lease of one half of this property expired in 1674 Joy rented the other half from Joseph Church (Richard's son) at £10 a year. A trifling difference over an expenditure for repairs was brought into court in 1677.§ The record of this case brings out the interesting fact that in 1676 Thomas Joy had again become sole owner of the mill which he had acquired of Bozoan Allen, nearly thirty years before.

In 1676 Thomas Joy was held for trial for "reproaching General Winslow, the authorities of the country and other misdemeanors."|| In the absence of further records we can only conjecture the causes which drew from the man of nearly seventy this new exhibition of the spirit of his earlier years. King Philip's War, which was then at its height, had brought great distress upon the colony, and a person of † Suffolk Court Files, Case 1433. In Case 1376 and 1433 Joseph Joy appears as his father's attorney or assignee. In the course of these suits there was a proceeding called "attaynt of the jury," which is said to have been common in this period. See Appendix.

§ Suffolk Court Files, Case 1633. Richard Church "was engaged as a carpenter in building the earliest church edifice in Plymouth," Savage's Gen. Dict. Benjamin Church, the Indian fighter, was one of his sons.

|| Drake's History and Antiquities of Boston (1856), p. 416; also Case No. 1633, Suffolk Court Files, where Ephraim Joy testified that "in 1676, about June or July or thereabouts" his father, Thomas Joy, was in prison. This reference, as well as the previous one of Winthrop's, suggests that Joy was a ready and forcible speaker, whose criticisms the government could not afford to overlook.

Thomas Joy's outspoken nature was not the man to reserve his criticism of a policy which was eating up property by taxation and causing increasing and unnecessary hardship. He is known to have lost his brother-in-law, John Gallop, who was a captain in the fearful swamp fight with the Narragansetts. If, as is supposed, his own son John was killed in a later campaign of the same war, the father's reproaches become intelligible.* On whatever theory this episode of 1676 is to be explained, it at any rate appears with sufficient clearness that Thomas Joy had the courage of his convictions, and that the spirit of independence which dominated his youth had not abated with the lapse of years.

It is evident from all that has been said that Thomas Joy considered himself rather of Boston than of Hingham, his adopted home. Yet as his children grew up and settled about him the ties to the smaller village grew stronger. He discharged his mortgages, recovered his interest in the saw and grist mills,† and lived the quiet life of a farmer. Five children (probably six, although the record of Benjamin is not clear) were born to him after his political troubles—Ephraim (1646-7), Sarah (1648), Benjamin (1650), Eliza (baptized 1652), Elizabeth (1653-4), Ruth (1658-9). Ephraim was born before the family left Boston and Ruth during the father's second period of residence there. He lived to see most of his children married in Hingham and to be the grandfather, too, of a numerous flock of Joys. The eldest son, Samuel, seems to have been associated in his father's business in Boston. Joseph, the first to wed, was a substantial builder and farmer at Hingham with a houseful of children. Ephraim, also a builder like his father, had struck out for himself in the settlement on the Piscataqua (now South Berwick, Me.), and had married there, returning to the home roof at least once before his father's death. Sarah and Elizabeth had families of their own, and only Ruth remained in her father's house. Thomas, Jr., and probably Eliza, had died in infancy. Of John and Benjamin we know little beyond the dates of birth or baptism.‡

* Bodge's History of King Philip's War. John Jay, of Marlborough, was a soldier in Captain Turner's company. It may be worth noting that the General Winslow whom Joy opposed was the Josiah Winslow who was governor of the Plymouth colony two years before when Thomas Joy was compelled to deliver up his deeds of Indian lands.

Thomas Joy died in Hingham, October 21, 1678, in the 69th (?) year of his age. His will, dated July 8, 1677, is as follows: *

The personal effects, as enumerated in the inventory attached to the will, are those of a well-to-do colonist in that day of small things. His real estate was extensive and valuable, though in his lifetime he had distributed a large part of his lands among his children, * Suffolk Probate Records, vol. vi, p. 280. The inventory is given in the Appendix.

† The will is signed with his mark, which we find affixed to several of his deeds, though he usually wrote his name "Thomas Joy," and sometimes "Tho. Joy." See vol. i, pp. 89, 97, and 117 of Suffolk Deeds. His "mark" generally appears as in the agreement regarding the Town-House, a facsimile of which is given (p. 22). The device is possibly a monogram of his initials, T. I. The practice of making a mark for a signature was singularly common in this period. John Gallop, Sr., Joy's father-in-law, signed his will with a mark, and for that reason an eminent antiquary unreflectingly alluded to him as "possessing less education than most of our early inhabitants" (N. E. Hist. Gen. Reg., vol. iii, p. 227; Winthrop's Journal, vol. i, p. 97). Yet in a paper (existing in 1853) relating to the location of the meetinghouse, and dated December 10, 1639, the name of Gallop, written by himself, is found among the signatures of "a considerable number of the inhabitants of the town." Our facsimile shows it to be an excellent specimen of the chirography of that day. See Drake's Hist. of Boston, p. 243.

and presumably disposed of his holdings in Boston.* Much of this property, including the mills and homestead and farm, had been acquired in 1647 from Bozoan Allen. John Hart,† “of Piscatow River had sold to him and Matthew Cushing jointly four acres in the waere neck.” The subsequent Joy colonies in Cohasset and Weymouth are perhaps connected with his ownership of twelve acres in “Conihasset upland,” and six acres “next the Weymouth line.” Other mowing lands in Hingham are located in the inventory.‡ It is to be observed that the grist mill, with the adjoining lands and improvements, are reckoned as a part of his estate.

The faithful widow, Joan Joy, who was thus left in comfortable circumstances, survived her husband more than a dozen years. Her life just touched the fourth generation of the American Joys, for she died in Hingham March 20, 1690-1, the next day after the birth of Prince Joy,<sup>4</sup> the first child of her grandchildren, Joseph<sup>3</sup> and Elizabeth (Andrews) Joy. With her forty years of wifehood and twelve as a widow she had reached a ripe old age. Thomas and Joan Joy were buried in the churchyard on the hill back of the meeting-house, which still stands, the most ancient Protestant church in the United States. §

Enough has been brought out in this sketch to enable us to grasp the salient features of the life of Thomas Joy and form a conception of his character. His extensive possessions in Boston and Hingham and elsewhere display prominently the love for landed interests which characterize him in common with the great body of the English gentry of the period in which he lived. Though he was styled a carpenter, he filled the requirements of architect and builder in the metropolis of his day, and his achievements easily place him in the first rank among those of his occupation throughout all the settlements of the * Joseph Joy refers in his will to land and other property received “by gift from my late Father Thomas Joy.” Samuel Joy owned land in Boston which his father gave him. Suffolk Deeds, vol. x, pp. 145, 275. The inventory includes only such property as Thomas Joy owned in Hingham at the time of his death. Ephraim’s settlement in Maine is perhaps due to his father’s interests there.

† Suffolk Deeds, vol. iiii, p. 491.

‡ See Appendix. He owned twenty-four acres “on the great plain,” five acres “in the plain neck,” four acres “by the old Planters Hill,” four acres at “Lalford’s Likeing,” and much more. See inventory of estate, and Suffolk Deeds, vol. i, p. 106; vol. viii, p. 182. A ledge on the famous Jerusalem Road, between Hingham and Nantasket, is still known as “Joy’s Rocks.”

§ In the “Rate of 1680” “For the building of a new Meeting-House” in Hingham, appears the following: “Joseph Joy promised £1 10s. 00d.” “Widow Joy,” “Thomas Joy,” and wife of “Thomas Joy” were assigned seats in the “new Meeting-House.”

Massachusetts Colony.* He had a large share of the energy and perseverance which have always been attributed to the Puritan settlers, and the successful way in which he preserved his own and his family fortunes at a trying period in his life revealed the loving husband and father endowed with no small degree of self-reliance, forethought, and endurance.

He was "orthodox in religion," and probably became a member of one of the local churches before his admission to citizenship. Nevertheless, he favored from the very first the extension of the suffrage to some of the non-freemen who were not church members, and, although he and his friends of a like mind failed to secure such a desirable amendment of the law at the time of their first attempt, he had the satisfaction of seeing the very principles for which they contended continually grow in popular favor, and at length become embodied in the form of an enactment under the old colony charter.

He has been styled an "ardent lover of liberty," and certainly his stand in the matter of the suffrage and the whole tenor of his life seem justly to entitle him to the distinction of such a designation. His independent spirit could brook no restraint or interference in what he believed to be his just civil and religious rights, and as he made no effort to conceal his opinions, but rather courageously and openly expressed them, he was led into inevitable antagonism with the constituted authorities. It was only temporary antagonism, however, and seems to have been occasioned by the intolerance of the clergy and the assumption of the magistrates rather than opposition to the puritanism of the churches. His position is therefore that of an advocate of a larger civil and religious liberty than was permitted the inhabitants of the colony in the first years of its existence, and it is creditable to his political sagacity and practical good sense that the liberty sought and eventually obtained operated so beneficially.

* Mr. Clough credits him with the design and construction of the best dwellings and meetinghouses of his day in New England. Professor John Fiske alludes to him as "the excellent 17th century architect" who "had a characteristic style." A copy of Mr. Clough's restoration of "the Joy Town House" was presented to the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1897 by one of Thomas Joy's descendants, and was exhibited at the council chamber in the City Hall in Boston during the exercises commemorating the seventh-fifth anniversary of the city government. It was reproduced in The Boston Herald September 18, 1897. Dr. Edward Everett Hale exhibited it in one of his Lowell Institute lectures on The History and Antiquities of Boston in 1897. The drawing has been published in the National Cyclopaedia of American Biography, vol. vii, p. 479; in Fiske's Beginnings of New England, pp. 305, xxxviii (1893), and has been included in the beautiful series of plates with American historical decorations which are made by Wedgwood, of England, for the Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Company, of Boston.

In his religious convictions and moral worth, in his intelligence, independence, and foresight, his business capacity and hard common sense, he is a worthy representative of the spirit and purpose and daily life of the early colonists of New England.

He was happy in his marriage and blessed in his children, and when he relinquished his life of active and useful service it was in the sight of a posterity already numerous and established, destined with the increase of the generations to perpetuate his name and honor his memory.

THOMAS JOY AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

THE FAMILY OF THOMAS AND JOAN (GALLOP) JOY.

THOMAS, parentage, date and place of birth unknown, probably b. about 1611,* in England, possibly Norfolk County, d. Hingham, in Massachusetts Bay Colony, Oct. 21, 1678. The will on file in probate records of Suffolk County, Mass., is dated 8 July, 1677, and proved 31 October, 1678. (The estate, chiefly in lands, was valued at £258.2.8.) Is described as a "house carpenter." Was a principal contractor, master builder, and architect in Boston. He first appears in Boston land records in 1636-7. After his political difference with Winthrop's government (1646) he removed to Hingham, fifteen miles distant, and became identified with that village though still holding property in Boston, and for some years resided there. All his children excepting the youngest were brought to the First Church in Boston for baptism. In Hingham he bought the dwelling, farm, and mill privilege of Bozoan Allen. He built or enlarged the grist mill at the town's cove, and erected a saw mill in the same locality. In 1658 he became a member of the Boston Artillery Company, now the famous "Ancient and Honorables," and in 1657-8 he built the house in the market place of Boston, which was at once the armory, court house, and town hall of Boston, and first seat of government of Massachusetts. In 1665 he was "admitted Freeman" of the Massachusetts Colony.

Married, 1637, Joan, dau. of John and Christabel Gallop, of Boston (b. Mosterne, County Dorset, England; d. Hingham, Mass., March 20, 1691). See The Gallup Family, Agawam, Mass., 1893.

*The passenger list of the ship Constance, Clement Campion, master, sailing from Gravesend for Virginia, Oct. 24, 1635, has the name of Thomas Jay, age 25. Several forms of the name (Joy, Joye, Jay, Jaye, and even Gee) were common in Norfolk, and are found in the early Boston records. It is possible that this Thomas eventually came to New England, and was our Thomas Joy.

THE families descended from Samuel,<sup>2</sup> the eldest son of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> form a group at once less numerous and less widely distributed than the descendants of his younger brothers, Joseph<sup>2</sup> and Ephraim.<sup>2</sup> He died at the age of 30, leaving an only son, Samuel,<sup>3</sup> who was brought up at Salisbury, Mass., in the family of Benjamin Eastman, whom his mother had married as her second husband. With Samuel<sup>2</sup> the stock divided, one branch remaining in Salisbury, where the name is still preserved, and one son, Samuel,<sup>4</sup> pushing northward into New Hampshire and settling about 1730 in that parish of Dover which is now the town of Durham. Several lines of his descendants are still found in New Durham and Newmarket, N. H., and others, the sons and grandsons of his grandson James,<sup>6</sup> have since 1840 found homes for themselves in other portions of New England, Michigan, Illinois, and elsewhere. The name Samuel has been handed down to the ninth generation: Samuel,<sup>2</sup> b. Boston, Mass., 1639-40; Samuel,<sup>3</sup> b. Hingham, Mass., 1670; Samuel,<sup>4</sup> b. He learned the trade of his father, the blacksmith, but prosecuted it with new energy, industry, and intelligence. He established a promising ship-building enterprise at Durham, which was ruined by the Embargo Act of 1808 and the War of 1812. In 1820 he removed to Pittsfield, N. H., where he bought the "John Cram farm," and utilized the water privilege for the manufacture of scythes and other implements, the firm name being latterly "J. Joy and Sons." He is regarded as the founder of the village of Pittsfield, and he was a chief benefactor of the local academy. About the year 1826 he organized a company for the manufacture of cotton goods in Pittsfield, and was the first agent of the corporation. Changes in the tariff laws so embarrassed these enterprises that Mr. Joy turned his attention to other things. In the spring of 1838 he went to Morgan Co., Ill., with his son, Charles, and bought farming lands on what is now "Joy Prairie," intending to emigrate, but (1840) having purchased the fine farm of Judge Livermore in the town of Holderness, near the village of Plymouth, N. H., he removed thither, where he passed the remainder of his active life. His last days were spent in Groton, Mass., with his unmarried children, Richard P. and Hannah. Wherever he lived he was noted for business enterprise, liberality, and high character. Not the least factor in his success was the energy and devotion of his indefatigable wife.

Sarah<sup>5</sup> was their youngest daughter. The Pickering family has borne a conspicuous part in the history of New Hampshire. A genealogical sketch of the New Hampshire Pickeringings was compiled by R. H. Eddy, Esq., and privately printed, Genealogical Data Respecting John Pickering, of Portsmouth, N. H., and his Descendants; Boston, 1884. Pp. 33 + iii. In the same year an important Supplement to Genealogical Data, etc., of 28 pp, was issued by the same editor. 36. * JOHN PICKERING <sup>7</sup> (James,<sup>6</sup> Jacob,<sup>5</sup> Samuel,<sup>4</sup> Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup>

* The story of the migration of James<sup>6</sup> Joy's three sons, John Pickering, Charles, and Sylvester, is told in a letter written in 1895 by the widow of Charles. It is substantially as follows: In the spring of 1838 Father Joy (James<sup>6</sup>) and his son Charles<sup>7</sup> came West from Pittsfield, N. H., and bought farms on what has since been "Joy Prairie," in Morgan Co., Ill. In September his sons Richard P.<sup>7</sup> and John P.,<sup>7</sup> the latter with wife, Judith, and his six-year-old son, Lyman,<sup>8</sup> came out, traveling all the way in a carriage, with one pair of horses, traveling some days fifty miles. All stood the journey well, which consumed exactly one month. Lake Erie was crossed in a boat. That same fall (1838), Father Joy and Charles went back. Charles married in March, 1839, and brought his wife to Illinois. His father and brother Calvin accompanied them. Both families (John and Charles) lived in a log cabin nearly opposite the present Joy family burying ground till November, when they moved into the new house which Father Joy had begun building and which is still a part of the home house (occupied, 1896, by Charles B. Joy<sup>8</sup>). Calvin had intended to open a store, but his health failed and he went back East with his father, where he died on Christmas Day, 1839. Richard P. returned to New Hampshire in the winter of 1839-40, traversing the entire distance on horseback in six weeks. In 1845 Sylvester Joy came out to his brothers John and Charles. He married in May, 1846, and settled in a house on the south side of the prairie. There the children were born. He afterward built on the north side of the prairie, but did not live to occupy it. His widow and, later, his married daughter, Hannah Joy Carter, have lived there.

38. HON. JAMES FREDERICK<sup>7</sup> (James,<sup>6</sup> Jacob,<sup>5</sup> Samuel,<sup>4</sup> Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Thomas<sup>1</sup>), b. Durham, N. H., Dec. 2, 1810; d. Detroit, Mich., Sept. 24, 1896. A.B. Dartmouth College, 1833, with valedictory oration. Principal of Pittsfield (N. H.) Academy. Tutor in Latin, Dartmouth College, 1834. LL.B. Harvard, 1836. LL.D., Dartmouth Coll. and Iowa Coll. Settled in Detroit, Mich., as a lawyer with George F. Porter, as "Joy & Porter. The firm practiced with conspicuous success for over twenty-five years, when other interests withdrew Mr. Joy from his profession. In 1845-6 Mr. Joy and Mr. J. W. Brooks prepared a charter, organized a corporation, raised the money and purchased from the State of Michigan the railway system, the construction of which had plunged the State into bankruptcy. This purchase, followed by the completion of the railroad—the “Michigan Central”—marks the turning point in the history of Michigan. Joy & Porter were attorneys for the corporation as well as for the Illinois Central, and successfully conducted two of the most important suits in the history of American railway litigation. Mr. Joy now abandoned the general practice of law, and devoted himself to the development of great railway enterprises. He was director of the “Illinois Central,” chief organizer and president of the “Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy,” president of the “Hannibal and St. Joseph.” He built the bridge across the Missouri, at Kansas City, which has made that city the leading market in the valley of the Missouri. He purchased in his own name 800,000 acres of land in Kansas from the Cherokee Indians, and organized the “Kansas City, Fort Scott, and Gulf Railroad Company,” and built a railroad through the strip under protection of government troops. In 1867 Mr. Joy resigned the management of the Burlington system, and accepted the presidency of the “Michigan Central Railroad Company,” from which he finally retired in 1876. At a later period he was nominally president of the Wabash Railroad Company, and aided materially in the difficult task of reorganizing that system. His last public enterprise was connected with the erection of the Union Depots at Detroit. In 1860–1 Mr. Joy was a member of the Legislature of Michigan, and in 1880 was delegate-at-large from his State to the Republican National Convention. In politics he was successively Whig, Free Soiler, and Republican. He was a staunch supporter of the Presbyterian Church. His home life was unostentatious, his family and his library furnishing its chief delights. The French and Latin classics were his favorite means of relaxation from the cares of business.

The traits of character which made James F. Joy the foremost citizen of his State and a chief factor in the prosperous development of a large section of our country were clearly marked. They were business integrity, common sense, untiring industry, prompt decision, and unswerving determination—all qualities clearly traceable in the lives of his parents.

The families on the spindle side are Wright, Wilder, Eaton, and Nichols. See The Hartwell Genealogy.

† The three Joy households, with the other New Hampshire families that settled near them, formed a neighborhood which soon acquired the name "Joy Prairie," and which in its thrift, education, morals, and religion was faithful to the traditions of the old New England home. In 1845 the settlers established a Congregational church at Concord, of which Sylvester Joy was a deacon. In 1864 a new church building was erected on the prairie, and the church took the name of Joy Prairie Congregational Church. Lyman F. Joy has been clerk and treasurer for more than thirty years (1896), and John B. Joy has been one of its deacons for twenty years. The names of twenty-six Joys, representing three generations, are upon its roll of membership. A record of the semi-centennial anniversary of the church was prepared by H. M. Tupper, J. B. Joy, and L. F. Joy, and printed in 1895.

THE greater number of persons of the Joy name in America doubtless derive their descent from Joseph,<sup>2</sup> of Hingham, five of whose grandsons married in that town and had large families, who soon dispersed over New England. Prince<sup>4</sup> settled in the "second parish," and became the ancestor of the Cohasset Joys. David<sup>4</sup> settled at Rehoboth, Mass., and his children founded numerous families in southern Vermont and western New York. John<sup>4</sup> has descendants in Boston and in England. Part of the posterity of Simon<sup>4</sup> have remained about Weymouth, Mass., where he settled; but three or four families of them emigrated to Hampshire Co., Mass., before the Revolution and have since gone westward. Jedediah<sup>4</sup> remained in Hingham, but his grandchildren went from Abington, Mass., to Vermont, New York State, and New Jersey. Descendants of Joseph<sup>2</sup> are probably now living in every Northern State.

* It is a family tradition that Zelah Joy was something of an engineer. At Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., N. Y., a wooden bridge over a creek was regularly washed away by the spring freshets. Mr. Joy offered to rebuild the bridge proof against anything short of an earthquake. He secured the contract and sprung a stone arch over the stream. The village wise men wagged their heads while he built, and predicted that the structure must collapse when the wooden framework was removed. One dark night the old Yankee stonemason and his son William slipped the keystone into place and pulled down the supports, leaving the perfect arch to confound his critics. The "Joy Bridge" still stands, testifying to his workmanship.

Marblehead, Mass., May 17, 1813; d. Boston, Mass., Feb. 16, 1868. Buried in Joy tomb, Marblehead. Francis H. Joy was brought up in the family of his grandfather Ramsdell, a Marblehead fisherman. His only teacher was a kind neighbor who taught him to read. At the age of twelve he began to earn his living, first as cook on board a Grand Banks fishing smack, and then as apprentice in a rope walk. Out of his small earnings he bought books and subscribed for a weekly newspaper, was active in a literary society and militia company. After a brief experience as a maker of women's shoes he was appointed (1838) to a department superintendency in the government cordage works at the Charlestown Navy Yard. This position he held until 1850. He was popular with the workmen, interested in political questions, captain of the Charlestown militia company (1841-47), a prominent Odd Fellow, and generally esteemed as an active, intelligent, and useful citizen. While acting as agent of a fire insurance company he made the acquaintance of Mr. F. M. Holmes, with whom, in 1850, he formed a partnership for the manufacture of furniture. The firm, at first "Holmes & Joy," afterward "F. M. Holmes & Co.," became one of the most prosperous in the country. Mr. Joy, who had charge of sales and correspondence, contributed greatly to its success. In his prosperity he did not forget his early life in the fisherman's cottage. In token of his regard for his grandmother, Margaret Ramsdell, he presented an organ and other gifts to the First Baptist Church in Marblehead. To his mother and the mother of his wife he assured a comfortable living, and made substantial recognition of his regard for many of his early and worthy associates.

* In the sixth generation from William "Dyre," one of the eighteen original owners of Rhode Island, who was Clerk of the Colony (1639) and afterward General Recorder, Clerk of the Assembly, and Attorney-General. His wife, Mary, a convert to Quaker principles, was apprehended by the authorities of Massachusetts and was executed on Boston Common in 1660, a martyr to her faith. William Dyre, Jr., the son of William and Mary, was Mayor of New York city, 1680-1. Heman Dyer was graduated at Kenyon College in 1833. He entered the Episcopal ministry; taught at Pittsburg, Pa., 1840-3, and was Professor and afterward President of the Western Pennsylvania University. From 1849 to 1860 he was successively connected with the American S. S. Union, Secretary of the Evangelical Knowledge Society, and Editor of the Episcopal Quarterly Review. In 1860 he was elected Bishop of Kansas, but declined. He has published The Voice of the Lord Upon the Waters, and The Records of an Active Life, an autobiography. Though for many years an invalid, Dr. Dyer is still recognized as one of the most trusted advisers and supporters of the Church to which he belongs.

Studied law at Harvard (LL.B., 1847), but becoming interested in scientific pursuits, gave his life to them. Took his doctor's degree at Göttingen University in 1853, and on his return to America was elected Professor of Chemistry in Union College. His work soon attracted attention, and in 1857 he was elected to the same chair in Columbia College in New York city, which he filled with distinction until 1877, when failing health compelled him to retire. Professor Joy was a member of the juries of the world's fairs of London, Paris, Vienna, and Philadelphia; was president of the N. Y. Lyceum of Natural History (now "Academy of Sciences"), of the American Photographic Society, and the Polytechnic Association of the American Institute, and foreign secretary of the American Geographical Society.

He was a member of numerous learned societies at home and abroad, was editor of the Journal of Applied Chemistry and other scientific periodicals, and a voluminous contributor upon topics relating to chemistry. For some years after resigning his chair he resided in Europe "and was known all over the city of his residence as the helper of wandering Americans, to whom he was a friend, interpreter, and guide." The closing months of his life were spent at Stockbridge, Mass., one of his favorite homes. In the New York Evangelist of June 4, 1891, the editor, Dr. Henry M. Field, pays a glowing tribute to the character of his friend, Professor Joy, "who will always remain in our memory as the type of the gentle scholar."

Boston, Mass., Apr. 6, 1828; d. Boston, Mass., Oct. 4, 1898. He was born on North Square, but the home of his boyhood was on Salem Street, near the old church where the signal lanterns were displayed for Paul Revere, Apr. 18, 1775. He attended the Eliot School on North Bennett Street, and entered business at an early age. He soon found employment with Mason, Lawrence & Co., dry goods commission merchants, where his character and ability gained him admission as a partner, the firm being then known as Lawrence & Co. In 1866 he left this house to become the active member of the firm of Frothingham & Co., and on the death of Mr. Frothingham, in 1872, he established the firm of Joy, Langdon & Co., having offices in Boston and New York, of which he continued to be an active member to the time of his death. For nearly fifty years he held a prominent place in the dry goods commission business, and had the closest connection, as selling agent, stockholder, director, and president, with many of the largest mills in New England. He was a director of the New England National Bank and one of the Board of Managers of the Suffolk Savings Bank for nearly forty years. Although eminently a business man, and giving his business his active and close attention, even up to a few hours of his death, he was a man of broad views, and his fine physique enabled him to do a large work in many other fields. When quite a young man he joined the Howard Benevolent Society, and was assigned to the personal charge of the "North End" district, covering very largely the land formerly owned by his paternal ancestor 'Thomas.' It was in this Society that he organized the system of relief for the needy upon substantially the principles of the Associated Charities of the present day. He was one of the first and most active trustees of the Home for Aged Men in Boston, of which he was for many years vice president. In 1889 he, as the prime mover, helped to establish the Bethany Home for Young Women, of which he was president until his death. He was deeply interested in, and served as treasurer of the committee which raised the funds for, the erection of the equestrian statue of Washington in the Public Garden. He realized to the fullest extent the value of the higher education, and gave unstintingly of his time and means to Dean Academy and Tufts College. Of the former he was for many years treasurer, and it was mainly through his efforts and credit that the academy was rebuilt promptly after a disastrous fire. Though not until 1880 a member of the Board of Trustees of Tufts College, he had always given valuable personal aid to the institution, and he had never missed in attendance upon its annual commencement exercises. Upon becoming a trustee he was elected a member of the Executive Board and Chairman of the Finance Committee. He held the office of President of the Board of Trustees for over ten years. Next to his family he prized his Church. From the time his mother took him, a child of four years, into the Sabbath school until the day of his death he never severed his active connection with it. He was brought up in the Universalist Church, and during his life saw a great change in the estimation in which that faith was held by the people. By natural bent an organizer, he came to maturity just at the time when this Church was prepared to take on a more stable form, and to this he contributed largely, being, in fact, the shaper of most of its organized forms. The Universalist Sabbath School Union was presided over by him for more than a decade; the Massachusetts Universalist Convention owes much of its present financial position to his thirty-five years' service as treasurer ; the Universalist General Convention (the national organization) elected him its president for many successive years, and he afterward served for over twenty years as chairman of its Board of Trustees ; as treasurer of the Universalist Publishing House for over thirty years, he had the satisfaction of seeing that institution firmly established. He was the "father" of the Universalist Club, rarely missing one of its meetings. As will be seen, his special attention in these various matters was given to the financial side, and it is largely through his work, advice, and counsel that all the organizations of the Church are to-day possessed of substantial foundations for the continuance of their service in futurity. The following reference to Mr. Joy's personal power of transmuting human energy into spiritual power is from an address by Rev. J. Coleman Adams, D.D., in All Souls' Church, Brooklyn: "I am especially impressed with this truth to-day as I think of a strong, positive, noble life which has gone out from the earthly communion of the Universalist Church. Last week the tidings came with the force of a personal grief to many, that the foremost, the most active, the most efficient layman in our ranks had passed away from us. John D. W. Joy, of Boston, has illustrated in our Church just this principle and law of the transformation of human energy into the institutions and the forces of our spiritual body. He was one of the most remarkable figures that ever stood in the councils of any Church. A strong, forceful, positive, courageous man, of keen insight, marvelous executive ability, fertile in resource, and prompt in action, he was one of the most providential men our Church ever had. He grew up into prominence and influence just as Universalism needed a compact and workable organization. He saw the needs of the hour, and he joyfully turned his strength to meet them. He was one of the real organizers of the Church under the present constitution. He was always a guide in its financial affairs. He laid the corner stone of much of its wealth. He fostered its finest institutions. He was the warm friend of its clergy, the adviser of its officials, the counselor of its wisest men. And all because he loved this Church and the faith for which it stood. He was the most loyal Universalist I ever knew. To him his Church was first and foremost. He was faithful to it 'for better or for worse.' His zeal for it was limitless, his industry in its behalf knew no bounds. His going away is the subtraction of a marvelous center of energy from our resources. In the affairs of our Convention, in the administration of Tufts College, in the management of the Publishing House, Mr. Joy was as active to-day as when he helped to found and form these organizations. It is certainly true of him that 'virtue went out of him' which put life into these institutions. They are in a larger sense than many people know the transformation of his personal force. Thank God that he had it in such degree and that he gave it so freely to us all." While an active and busy man, he was one who enjoyed his home, and gave it his time to the full, and those who had the pleasure of knowing him there will best remember and cherish his memory by those associations.

HENRY MILNER<sup>8</sup> (Noah,<sup>7</sup> Nehemiah,<sup>6</sup> Nehemiah,<sup>5</sup> Simon,<sup>4</sup> Joseph,<sup>3</sup> Ensign Joseph,<sup>2</sup> Thomas<sup>1</sup>), b. Middlebury, O., July 20, 1836; thrown from his carriage and killed, Greencastle, Ind., Sept. 30, 1886. In infancy Henry M. Joy removed with his parents, first to Elyria, O., and later to Walworth Co., Wis., where his mother died. He then returned with his father to Troy, O., where, in 1848, he was left an orphan at the age of twelve years. For a brief period he lived with an elder brother at Elyria, O., and attended school, but scanty means soon compelled him to leave school and support himself by working as a carpenter. At the age of seventeen he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1857 he removed to Climax, Mich., and the next year was licensed as an exhorter and local preacher of his denomination. In 1859 he entered the active work of the ministry, in which he achieved great success by his abilities as a preacher, pastor, and executive officer. He served for several years as secretary of the Michigan Annual Conference, was an able presiding elder, and led its delegation in the General Conference of 1884. For five years he was an efficient trustee of Albion College, and that institution conferred upon him, in 1883, its honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. After twenty-five years of fruitful labor in Michigan, Dr. Joy was transferred, in 1886, to an important church in Greencastle, Ind., the seat of De Pauw University. He had preached but once in his new charge when an accident terminated his vigorous and useful life. He was buried at Grand Rapids, Mich. The "Joy Memorial Church" in that city commemorates his life and work.

Swanton, Vt., Dec. 25, 1844. Residence (1900), Carlsruhe, Germany. The Princess Salm-Salm has won distinction in America and Europe. Her husband, who had served with honor in the armies of Prussia and Austria, came to America in 1861 and entered the Union army as colonel and chief-of-staff of Brig. Gen. Louis Blenker. He met Agnes Joy in Washington in 1861, and they were married in August, 1862. In November, 1862, he was commissioned colonel of the 8th New York Vols., and from June 8, 1864, commanded the 68th New York Vols. under General Sherman. On April 13, 1865, he was breveted brigadier general of volunteers, and was afterward military governor of the important district of Atlanta. In 1866 he joined the foreign forces in Mexico, where Maximilian made him his personal aide with the rank of colonel. He was captured with the "Emperor" and with him condemned to death, though President Juarez spared his life through the entreaties of the princess. Concerning this experience he published in 1868 My Diary in Mexico (2 vols., London: R. Bentley). On his return to Europe he was appointed major of the Queen Augusta Regiment of the Guards in the Prussian army, and was killed in the Franco-Prussian war while heroically leading the assault of his battalion at Gravelotte. The Princess Agnes was the inseparable companion of her husband throughout his varied and romantic career. In the civil war "the soldier princess" was not only a picturesque figure in the social life of the army, but her unfailing cheerfulness, warm sympathy, and womanly ministrations in the hospitals endeared her to the men. It was largely due to her popularity and influence that the military talents of her foreign-born husband received the official recognition and reward which they merited. Her devotion, energy, courage, and resourceful diplomacy were most brilliantly displayed in Mexico in the crisis of Maximilian's affairs. Disregarding hardships and personal danger, she rode day and night between his prison at Queretaro and the Liberal headquarters, negotiating terms, securing delay of judicial proceedings, and on her knees beseeching Juarez to spare the life of the unfortunate emperor. For her efforts in his behalf Maximilian decorated her with the Grand Cordon of the Order of San Carlos (the last he ever bestowed), his mother, the Archduchess Sophie, gave her his miniature set in an emerald bracelet, and the Emperor of Austria pensioned her. In July, 1870, undaunted by the rigor of Prussian military discipline, she obtained from General von Steinmetz the permission—never before granted to a woman—to accompany his staff with the army of invasion, and both before and after the death of her gallant husband she exerted herself to the utmost, organizing hospitals and distributing supplies and delicacies among the sick and wounded. She was recommended for the Order of the Iron Cross (an honor reserved for men), and received the Prussian medal of honor made from captured cannon. The Empress Augusta, meeting her in a hospital, gave her a bracelet from her own wrist, and she has autograph letters of thanks from the commanding generals of the armies in which she ministered. Her book, Ten Years of My Life, is an entertaining narrative of her experiences in the United States, Mexico, and Europe from 1861 to 1871. In 1899 she revisited America for the purpose of restoring the flags of her husband's regiments—the 8th and 68th New York—to the survivors, who granted her honorary membership in the Blenker Veteran Association. She was elected in 1899 an honorary member of the New York Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. In 1900 she was again in this country in the interest of raising funds to equip an ambulance corps for the relief of the wounded in the South African war.

Married, I, in St. Patrick's Church, Washington, D. C., Aug. 30, 1862, Felix Johann Nepomat Marie, Count von Stein, Duke von Hoogstråten, Prince zu Salm-Salm, younger son of the reigning prince (b. Anholt, Prussia, Dec. 25, 1828; died of wounds received in the battle of Gravelotte, Aug. 18, 1870).

he studied law, and was admitted to the bar of New York in 1857. Soon thereafter he removed to Ottumwa, Ia., where, in 1860, he was appointed City Attorney, holding that office for two years. When the civil war broke out he took an active interest in raising and equipping troops, and in 1862 entered the U. S. service as captain in the 36th Regiment of Iowa Infantry. He served with distinction in the Southwest, notably throughout the Vicksburg Campaign. In 1864 he was appointed by President Lincoln Major and Judge Advocate U. S. Vols., and assigned to the Seventh Army Corps, Maj. Gen. Frederick Steele, commanding. He was subsequently made Judge Advocate of the Department of the Arkansas, with headquarters at Little Rock. In this position he had much to do with the organization of a judicial system for Arkansas and the Indian Territory, and aided in the organization of a State government under a new constitution for the State of Arkansas. After the war Col. Joy returned to Newark, N. J., entered into partnership with his father in business, and became a member of the New York Produce Exchange. After his father's death the business was continued by Col. Joy during the remainder of his life. In 1871 and 1872 he represented his district in the Legislature of New Jersey, being chairman of the judiciary committee in the latter year. He was an early member of the Newark Board of Trade, its president 1875-76, and its treasurer 1879-92. In 1877 he became a member of the Board of Education of the city of Newark, continuing in that office until the close of 1888, and was for three years honored with the presidency of that body. In 1880 he was a delegate to the National Republican Convention, and in 1884 was appointed by President Arthur a government director of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. He was one of the incorporators of the Manufacturers National Bank of Newark, and was identified with other financial institutions of that city as well as of New York. Edmund L. Joy was a man of great energy and intellectual capacity, remarkable analytical power, quick and comprehensive grasp on affairs, excellent judgment, and keen wit. He was happy in the faculty of expressing himself readily in language at once accurate and elegant, was noted for his excellent impromptu addresses, and in the exercise of his abilities as a public speaker won enviable distinction. He was a genial and entertaining companion, a warm friend, and withal a Christian gentleman, conscientious in the discharge of every duty, mindful of the rights of his fellow-men and faithful in the service of his Maker. Buried in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery.

1. EPHRAIM<sup>2</sup> (Thomas<sup>1</sup>), b. Boston, Mass., 7, 12, 1646; bapt. First Church, Boston, 12, 28, 1646; d. Kittery, Me., ante 1699. (See bk. 6, p. 61, York Co. Deeds.) Carpenter and farmer. He seems to have been at Kittery as early as 1673, and married there. He was evidently in Hingham in the autumn of 1677, and the birth of his daughter Tabitha is recorded there. He is mentioned in his father's will the following year, 1678. Nov. 15, 1683, his name appears among the heirs of the estate of his wife's mother, Patience (Chadbourne) Spencer.* In 1684 William Spencer conveys land in Berwick (on eastern highway leading to Hutchinson's Mill) to Ephraim and Susanna (Spencer) Joy. Married, "before 1673," Susanna, dau. Thomas and Patience (Chadbourne) Spencer, widow of John Gattensby.

CHILDREN.

- i Tabitha, b. Hingham, Mass., Sept. 25, 1677; m., Dover, N. H., Feb. 10, 1700, Rowland Jenkins.
- ii Ephraim, b. —; m., 1703, Sarah Nocke; d. 1716.
There is a tradition of a son Thomas, and daughters.

* Patience Spencer was the widow of Thomas Spencer, who was sent over by Mason to Piscataqua in 1630, and the daughter of William Chadbourne, who, Mar. 14, 1633-34, with his partners, James Wall and John Goddard, signed an agreement (a duplicate original in Mass. Archives 3, 437) with John Mason to go over and remain five years, they to have three quarters of the profits from the mills and own three quarters of the houses which Mason was to furnish. They came over with Henry Jocelyn in the Pide Cow, arriving at Portsmouth July 8, 1634. Her brother, Humphrey Chadbourne, remembers her affectionately in his will May 6, 1667. Widow Spencer kept an inn at Saco, 1662. no

Limington, Me., July 18, 1823; d. Winchester, Mass., Feb. 17, 1889. Lawyer. Prepared for college at Limerick Academy and the New Hampton (N. H.) Institute, entering Colby University as a sophomore in 1845, and afterward taking a "dismission" to Harvard College. He studied law at Saco, Me., in the office of Hon. John Fairfield and Chief Justice Shepley, and at Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated in 1848. Soon after graduation he opened an office in Joy's Building in Boston (owned by the heirs of Benjamin Joy, and situated on Washington Street, a few steps from the original lands of Thomas Joy<sup>1</sup>). By his own unaided efforts he at once established a large and lucrative clientage, which continued to the time of his decease. He early mingled in public affairs, and was chosen an alderman of the City of Boston in 1855. As an alderman he was active, public spirited, and influential, and the erection of the Boston Public Library building and the filling of the Back Bay section were accomplished largely through his efforts. He also represented the City of Boston in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1857 as a Republican, and filled other offices of trust and honor. He was prominent in Masonic circles, and was a member of the Boston Commandery. In the various phases of professional life he was often charged with the responsibility of important interests, visiting Europe several times on matters of large moment, and in his connection with banks, railroads, and other corporations, or as trustee at times for large amounts, Mr. Joy always filled every position with ability and fidelity.

(A) THE JAY (JOY) FAMILY OF NORFOLK.

SEVERAL grants of arms have been made to Joy and Jay (Jaye) of England and Ireland. The bearing figured on page 75 was granted in 1738 to John Joy, of Benefield, England. The arms granted to Jaye, of London and Norfolk, 1601, are described on page 10 and figured below :

JAYE, OF LONDON AND NORFOLK, GRANTED 1601.

This Jay family occupied the manor of Holverston, on the road between Yelverton and Hillington, in County Norfolk. Mr. J. C. J. Brown, of Boston, Mass., has added to our obligations by preparing from Blomfield's History of Norfolk County, and the Heraldic Visitations, the following pedigree of this family :

The name of the Norfolk family is spelled as our Thomas probably spelled it, though his American posterity have fixed upon a different vowel. The name Hobart, of Norfolk, has suffered far more, as the forms Hobart, Hubbard, Hubert, etc., bear witness. The close relations between the Hobarts, of Norfolk, and the Jays, furnish a suggestive parallel to Thomas Joy's relations with the Hobarts of the American Hingham. Thomas Joy's pastor in Hingham was the Rev. Peter Hobart; his partner in important operations was Capt. Joshua Hobart, who also witnessed his last will. At the same time in England Elizabeth Hobart, of Holverston, makes bequests to "my friend Mrs. Jay, my friend Major Jay, and my little godson Robert Jay, Mistress Mary Jay, and Mistress Ann Jay." In Essex County, England, in 1684, Isaac Hubbard was brother-in-law of Mr. John Jaye. In a recent post office directory of Norfolk County, England, the name Joy appears but once. There are a dozen Jays in the same list, including "Thomas Jay, miller, of Diss," and such familiar Christian names as James, George, Benjamin, William, Charles, and Joshua. Mr. Brown, an experienced genealogist, concludes that the region of Norfolk about Norwich is the ground which must be visited by the person who shall at no distant day, we trust, discover the birthplace and parentage of Thomas Joy the Colonist.

(B) DOCUMENTS RELATING TO THOMAS JOY, COLONIST.

(a) THOMAS JOY'S LANDS IN BOSTON.

The Book of Possessions, sometimes called the "Doomsday Book," of Boston, was intended to be an official record of all lands in the town, with description and ownership, as a basis for future conveyance. It was compiled some time between 1640 and 1650, but the time was twice extended—to 1652 and 1657. Our plan of the portion of Boston showing the two lots of Thomas Joy as described in the Book of Possessions has been furnished by J. C. J. Brown, Esq., for this book. One lot was by the water side, a "meerstead," and here stood his dwelling hard by that of his father-in-law, John Gallop. These "cove lots" were accounted the most desirable business locations in the town, and were owned by the principal men of the town. The second, or inland lot, of about an acre, became the social center, or "court end," of the provincial capital. The mansions of Governor Hutchinson and Sir Charles Henry Frankland were built upon it. The church of the Mathers bordered it, and later the home of Paul Revere occupied a part of it. The valuable lot on Bendall's Cove which Thomas Joy deeded to Bozoan Allen in 1647 (with the new house upon it and wharf) is not given as belonging to Joy in the Book of Possessions, and does not appear on our plan.

(b) THE GALLOP WILLS.

Bequests in the will of John Gallop, father of Thomas Joy's wife Joan, dated 20th of the 10th month, 1649 :

"To sonne John Gallop, my new shallop after my death. To my daughter Joane my heaffer. . . . My two youngest sons shall employ my barcke the first year after my decease wholly for their mother, and after one year to have two thirds for themselves and one third for their mother, and to repair and maintain the barcke themselves, looking for no help from their mother, only she shall have the third of profit; also my wife shall have the use of howses, lands, and goods, for hir comfortable maintenance so long as shee shall live; after hir decease it shall wholly remayne and equally divided to my two youngest sonnes Samuel Gallop and Nathaniel Gallop, if they carry themselves as obedient children to their mother; but if they be rebellious then shee shall have liberty to dispose of all as shee shall think Good; and if one sonne dye before the other then all to remayne to the other; if both dye before their mother, then my wife shall dispose of all as shee shall thinke Goode. I doe give to John Joy, my daughter's sonne £5 to be paid to him at 21 yeares of age, and if he dye before it shall remain to his brother Joseph. I doe give forty shillings to the building of the new meeting howse. . . . Thus desiring to leave my wife & children & all unto the wise disposing Providence of Almighty God, desiring his blessing upon them and craving favor of his love to their souls in the Lord Jesus Christ."

Extract from the will of Christabel Gallop :

"Being in perfect memory though weak in body this 24th of the 5th month 1655: I doe give unto my sonne, John Gallop, halfe my money which is about £15, & I doe give him ye bed I lye on, with one boulster, one coverlid & blankett, also one of the best brasse kettles, a sea chest, a great bible, one pewter platter, one paire of sheetes, one pillowber, five napkins, one holland board cloth; and halfe my wareing clothes I do give Hannah my sonne John Gallops wife. I doe give to my daughter Joane Joye halfe my money, with one great brasse pot, with one of ye best brasse kettles, one flock bed, two blancketts, also, one paire of my best sheetes, one beareing sheete, one odd sheete, one pewter candlestick, one porringer, one pewter platter and five napkins, with halfe my wareing clothes. All these I doe give to my daughter Joane Joye."

(c) THE CHILD REMONSTRANCE AND PETITION.

This memorial of Robert Child and others praying for a liberal reform in the government of New England was the cause of the political agitation in Boston in 1646. Thomas Joy's part in it is clearly set forth in the sketch of his life, pp. 14-16 of this volume. The petition is here given in full from the reprint in the Hutchinson Collection of Original Papers, pp. 188-196 :

"A Remonstrance and Petition of Robert Child, and others :

"To the worshipful the Governor, the Deputy Governor, and the rest of the Assistants of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, together with the Deputyes of the General Court now assembled in Boston.

“The Remonstrance and humble Petition of us whose names are underwritten, in behalfe of ourselves and divers others within the jurisdiction, humbly sheweth,

“That we cannot but with all thankfulness acknowledge your indefatigable paines, continuall care and constant vigilancy, which, by the blessing of the Almighty, hath procured unto this wilderness the much desired fruits of peace and plenty: While our native land, yea the christian world, is sharply afflicted with the devouring sword and the sad consequents of intestine wars.

“And further, that you whom the Lord hath placed at the helme of these plantations, and endowed with eminent gifts fitt for such honourable callings, are best able to foresee the clouds which hang over our heads, the storms and tempests which threaten this poor handfull here planted, and timously to amend them. Notwithstanding, those who are under decks, being at present unfit for higher employments, may perceive those leaks which will inevitably sink this weake and ill compacted vessell, if not by your wisdomes opportunely prevented. We who, in behalfe of ourselves and divers of our countrymen, laying our hands upon our breasts and seriously considering that the hand of our good God, who through his goodnesse hath safely brought us and ours through the great ocean and planted us here, seems not now to be with us, yea rather against us, blasting all our designs, though contrived with much deliberation, undertaken with great care, and proceeding with more than ordinary probability of successful events, by which many of good estates are brought to the brink of extreame poverty, yea at this time laying his just hand upon our familie, taking many away to himself, striking others with unwonted malignant sicknesses, and with some shameful diseases, have thought it convenient with all respectivenesse to present these our sincere requests and remonstrances to this honored court, hoping we have found out those special leaks, which concurring with many and great sins of this place (which our consciences know and our brethren of England are not ignorant of) are the special causes of the Lords turning his face from us, leaving us to ourselves, and consequently to strife, contention, unfaithfulness, idleness, and of lamentable faylings, not blessing us in any of our endeavours, so as to give us any great hopes of staple commodities, and consequently of comfortable subsistence, though we, to the utmost of our power, these many years, even to the exhausting of our estates and spirits, have endeavoured the same; but contrariwise, all things grow worse and worse, even to the threatening (in our apprehensions) of no less than finall ruine; not doubting but that you will receive them with the same candour of mind which we, not ayming at novelty or disturbance, but at the glory of God, our allegiance to the state of England, and good of these poor plantations (if our hearts receive us not) present them unto you, though for want of skill and other necessary helpe roughly drawne up; and hope that you will be more diligent in amending than we in searching out the causes of these our present calamities, &c. Not to trouble you who are employed in the most serious affairs of these plantations with many words, we shall briefly referre them to these heads, &c.

“1. Whereas this place hath been planted by the encouragement, next under God, of letters patents given and granted by his Majesty of England to the inhabitants thereof, with many privileges and immunities, viz. Incorporation into a company, liberty of choosing governors, setting government, making lawes not repugnant to the lawes of England, power of administring the oath of allegiance to all, &c., as by the said letters patents more largely appeareth. Notwithstanding we can not, according to our judgments, discern a settled forme of government according to the lawes of England, which may seem strange to our countrymen, yea to the whole world, especially considering we are all English. Neither do we so understand and perceyve our owne lawes or libertyes, or any body of lawes here so established, as that thereby there may be a sure and comfortable enjoyment of our lives, libertyes, and estates, according to our due and naturall rights, as freeborne subjects of the English nation. By which, many inconveniences flow into plantations, viz. jealousies of introducing arbitrary government, which many are prone to beleeve, construing the procrastination of such settled lawes to proceed from an overgreedy spirit of arbitrary power (which it may be is their weaknes) such proceedings being detestable to our English nation, and to all good men, and at present a cheife cause of the intestine warre in our deare country: Further, it gives cause to many to thinke themselves hardly dealt with, others too much favored, and the scale of justice too much bowed and unequally balanced: From whence also proceedeth feares and jealousies of illegal committments, unjust imprisonments, taxes, rates, customes, levyes of ungrounded and undoing assessments, unjustifiable presses, undue fynes, unmeasurable expenses and charges, of unconceivable dangers through a negative or destructive vote unduly placed, and not well regulated, in a word, of a non certainty of all things we enjoy, whether lives, libertyes or estates: and also of undue oaths, being subject to exposition, according to the will of him or them that gives them, and not according to a due and unbowed rule of law, which is the true interpreter of all oathes to all men, whether judge or judged.

“ Wherefore our humble desire and request is, that you would be pleased to consider of our present condition and upon what foundation we stand, and unanimously concur to establish the fundamental and wholesome laws of our native country, and such others as are no wayes repugnant to them, unto which all of us are most accustomed; and we suppose them best agreeable to our English tempers, and yourselves obliged thereunto by the generall charter and your oathe of allegiance. Neither can we tell, whether the Lord hath blessed many in these parts with such eminent politicall gifts, so as to contrive better lawes and customes than the wisest of our nation have with great consideration composed, and by many hundred years experience have found most equal and just; which have procured to the nation much honour and renowne amongst strangers, and long peace and tranquility amongst themselves. And for the more strict and due observation and execution of the said lawes by all the ministers of justice, That there may be a settled rule for them to walke by in all cases of judicature, from which if they swerve there may be some power settled, according to the lawes of England, that may call them to account for their delinquences, which may be a good meanes to prevent divers unnecessary appeals into England.

“ 2. Whereas there are many thousands in these plantations, of the English nation, freeborne, quiett and peaceable men, righteous in their dealings, forward with hand, heart and purse, to advance the public good, knowne friends to the honorable and victorious Houses of Parliament, lovers of their nation, &c., who are debarred from all civill employments (without any just cause that we know) not being permitted to bear the least office (though it can not be denied but some are well qualified) no not so much as to have any votes in choosing magistrates, captains, or other civill and military officers; notwithstanding they have here expended their youth, borne the burthen of the day, wasted much of their estates for the subsistence of these poore plantations, paid all assessments, taxes, rates, at least equall, if not exceeding others, yea when the late warre was denounced against the Narrowgansett Indians, without their consent, their goods were seized on for the service, themselves and servants especially forced, and impressed to serve in that warre, to the hazarding of all things most dear and near unto them, whence issue forth many inconveniences, secret discontents, murmurings, rents in the plantations, discouragements in their callings, unsettlednes in their minds, strife, contention, and the Lord only knows to what a flame in time it may kindle; also jealousies of too much unwarranted power and dominion on the one side, and of perpetual slavery and bondage on the other, and which is intollerable, even by those who ought to love and respect them as brethren.

“ We therefore desire that civil liberty and freedom be forthwith granted to all truly English, equal to the rest of their countrymen, as in all plantations is accustomed to be done, and as all freeborne enjoy in our native country; (we hoping here in some things to enjoy greater liberties than elsewhere, counting it no small losse of liberty to be as it were banished from our native home, and enforced to lay our bones in a strange wildernes) without imposing any oathes or covenant on them, which we suppose can not be warranted by the letters patent, and seeme not to concur with the oath of allegiance formerly enforced on all, and later covenants lately imposed on many here present by the honorable houses of parliament, or at least to detract from our native country and lawes, which by some are stiled foreign, and this place termed rather a free state, than a colonie or corporation of England; all of us being very willing to take such oathes and covenants as are expressions of our desires of advancing the glory of God and good of this place, and of our duties to the state of England, and love of our nation, being composed according to the lawes and customes of other corporations of England; but all of us are exceeding unwilling by any pollicies whatsoever to be rent from our native country, though far distant from it, valuing our free derivations, the immunities and privileges which we and our posterity doe and we hope shall always enjoy above the greatest honors of this country, not cemented to the state of England, and glory to be accounted though but as rushes of that land, yet that we may continue to write that we and ours are English; or least we entreat that the bodies of us and ours (English subjects possessing here no privileges) may not be impressed, nor goods forcibly taken away, least we, not knowing the justice of this warre, may be ignorantly and unwillingly enforced upon our own destruction, and that all assessment, taxes, impositions, which are many and grievous (if civill liberty be not granted) may be taken of, that in all things we may be strangers, otherwise we suppose ourselves in a worse case here and less free than the natives amongst whom we live or any aliens. Further, that none of the English nation, who at this time are too forward to be gone, and very backward to come hither, be banished, unless they break the known lawes of England in so high a measure, as to deserve so high a punishment; and that those few that come over may settle here without having two magistrates hands, which sometimes not being possible to obtain, hath procured a kind of banishment to some, who might have been serviceable to this place, as they have been to the state of England, &c. And we likewise desire that no greater punishments be inflicted upon offenders than are allowed and sett by the laws of our native country.

“ 3. Whereas there are divers sober, righteous and godly men, eminent for knowledge and other gracious gifts of the holy spirit, noe wayes scandalous in their lives and conversation, members of the church of England (in all ages famous for piety and learning) not dissenting from the latest and best reformation in England, Scotland, &c. yet they and their posterity are detained from the seales of the covenant of free grace, because, as it is supposed, they will not take these churches covenants, for which as yet they see no light in God's word; neither can they clearly perceive what they are, every church having their covenant differing from others, at least in words : Yea some churches sometime adding, sometime detracting, calling it sometimes the covenant of grace, sometimes a branch of it, sometimes a profession of the free covenant, &c. notwithstanding they are compelled, under a severe fine, every Lords day to appear at the congregation, and notice is taken of such who stay not till baptism be administered to other mens children, though denied to their owne, and in some places forced to contribute to the maintenance of those ministers who vouchsafe not to take them into their flock, though desirous of the ordinances of God, &c. yet they are not accounted so much as brethren, nor publickly so called, nor is christian vigilancy (commanded to all) any way exercised to them. Whence, as we conceive, doe abound an ocean of inconveniences, dishonor to God and to his ordinances, little profit by the ministry, encrease of anabaptisme, and of those that totally contemn all ordinances as vaine, fading of christian graces, decrease of brotherly love, heresies, schismes, &c. the whole body of the members of the church of England, like sheep scattered in the wildernes, without a shepard, in a forlorn condition.

“ We therefore humbly entreat you, in whose hands it is to help and whose judicious eyes discern these great inconveniences, for the glory of God and the comfort of your brethren and countrymen, to give liberty to the members of the church of England, not scandalous in their lives and conversations (as members of these churches) to be taken into your congregation and to enjoy with you all those liberties and ordinances Christ hath purchased for them, and into whose name they are baptised, that the Lord may be one and his name one amongst us in this place ; that the seales of the covenant may be applied to them and their posterity, as we conceive they ought to be, till inconveniences hereby be found prejudiciall to the churches and colony (which we hope shall never be) not doubting but the same christian favour will be shewed to all its members of these churches, when they shall retire to our dear native country (if their conversations be righteous and holy) or otherwise to grant liberty to settle themselves here in a church way, according to the best reformations of England and Scotland, if not, we and they shall necessitated to apply our humble desires to the honourable houses of parliament, who we hope will take our sad conditions into their serious considerations, to provide able ministers for us (this place not being so well provided as to spare any) or else out of their charity, many estates being wasted, to transport us to some other place, where we may live like christians and not be accounted burthens, but serviceable both to church and state.

“ These things being granted, by the blessing of God to us in Christ, we hope to see the now contemned ordinances of God highly prized, the gospel, much darkened, break forth as the sun at noon day, christian charity and brotherly love, almost frozen, wax warm, zeal and holy emulation more fervent, jealousy of arbitrary government (the bane of all common wealths) quite banished, the wicked, if any such be found, in their courses disheartened, the righteous actors in their wayes encouraged, secret discontents fretting like cankers, remedied, merchandising, and shipping by speciall providence wasted, speedily encreased, mines undertaken with more cheerfulness, fishing with more forwardnes, husbandry now withering forth with flourishing, villages and plantations much deserted presently more populous, all mechanicall trades the great enriching of all common wealths heartily going on, stable commodities the life of trade presently raised, our almost lost credit regayned, our brethren of Englands just indignation and their force as a post flying from us turned to embrace us, the honourable houses of parliament patrons of piety under their wings in these dangerous times with alacrity shrowding us, the privileges and immunities which we and ours enjoy in our native land more firmly settled, forreign enemies dayly threatening totally discouraged, unsettled men now abounding firmly planted, that the prosperity of England may not be the ruine of this plantation but the contrary, hands, hearts, and purses now streightened freely opened for public and honorable services, strife and contention now rife abated, taxes and sesses lightened, the burthens of the state but pleasure, &c. To conclude, all businesses in church and common wealth which for many years have seemed to go backward, beyond our desert yea expectation, the good hand of our God going along with us, successfully thriving.

“And shall always pray the Almighty, the only wise God, to guide you with his wisdom, strengthen you with his power in all your undertakings, that all may be for the glory and good of his people, and that he would blesse your wisdom with the blessing of peace, plenty, and long dayes, &c.

(e) THE JOY-WOODMANSEY PAPERS.

Case 1433, Files of the Supreme Court of Suffolk County, Mass., is interesting to all descendants of Thomas Joy, of Boston, for among the papers filed in the case is a bill of account of the merchant Woodmansey against Joy, together with Joy's account against him. A close reading of these apparently commonplace entries will throw considerable light upon Mr. Joy's manner of life, his personal expenditure, and his business methods.

In April, 1675, Thomas Joy, of Hingham, carpenter, brought suit against John Woodmansey, of Boston, to recover debt “ to the value of £385 2s. 8d., due to said Thomas Joy for several parcels of money, £91 for a warehouse, by appraisement, timber planks, boards, and goods.” Woodmansey opposed a counter claim against Thomas Joy for goods, etc., and damage “ for not performing his several contracts and covenants.” See on p. 26 preceding. The itemized accounts are here reprinted in full :

(C) THE SALISBURY-HINGHAM LINK.

(D) OTHER JOY FAMILIES.

In tracing the line of Thomas Joy's descendants the editor has come upon a number of well-defined groups of Joy families which cannot, in the present state of our knowledge, be connected with the Boston-Hingham colonist. Some of them, doubtless, sprang from later emigrations. Others, like those of Maine, seem to be of our line, though the evidence is not yet complete. The publication of the following notes on these families may lead to the solution of some of these problems :

(a) THE NANTUCKET FAMILY.

A considerable number of the American Joys trace their descent from Samuel Joy, of Dartmouth, Mass., who settled on the island of Nantucket about 1730, having at that time adult sons, David and Ebenezer. His origin is not known, but there is good reason to believe that he was the son of Peter Joy (b. 1637) and Sarah Gaskins, of Salem, Mass., who were married May 24, 1661, and had David,* b. 1662; Anna, b. 1663; Sarah,† b. 1666; Peter, ‡ b. 1669; William,§ b. 1675; and Samuel, b. 1678.

The following partial record of the descendants of Samuel, of Dartmouth and Nantucket, was begun by Hon. David Joy, of Nantucket, and greatly enlarged by Joseph N. Joy, Esq., of Meriden, Conn. (1899):

1. SAMUEL<sup>2</sup> (probably Peter,<sup>1</sup> of Salem), b. Salem, Mass. (?), July 25, 1678; d. Nantucket before 1733. An early settler of Dartmouth, Mass. Removed to Nantucket before 1730.
Married, I, Elizabeth —; II, Lydia —.

CHILDREN.

- 2 Ebenezer, b. —; m. Elizabeth Covell.
- 3 David, b. 1707, about; m., 1, Mary Taber; 2, Sarah Gardner; d. 1787.

2. EBENEZER<sup>3</sup> (Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Peter<sup>1</sup>), b. Dartmouth, Mass. (?); d. Nantucket.
Married, Elizabeth Covell, of Dartmouth, Mass.

CHILDREN.

Matthew.
Samuel, m. Susanna Stubbs; no children.
Lydia, b. Aug. 2, 1744; m. John Chadwick.
Thankful, m. Zaccheus Coffin, Jr.; d. 1810.
Mary, m. Stephen Skinner; d. 1810.
John,|| m. Charity —.

* David Joy's name appears on Salem Town Record in a list made up in 1691, including persons who died since 1689.

† Sarah, m. — Dotteridge, of Salem.

‡ A Peter, possibly son of Peter, Jr., m., 1729, Abial Randall, of Providence, R. I., and had there Samuel, Job, Sarah, Peter, and Abial. The names strongly suggest a connection with the Salem family.

§ William, "shipwright," d. 1699.

|| Ebenezer B. Joy, of Dennisport, Barnstable County, Mass. (1897), is son of Ebenezer Brooks Joy, son of John Joy, said to be from Nantucket. Also Daniel Joy, of Providence, R. I. (1896), traces his descent from a John Joy who came to Barnstable County from Nantucket, and was "ancestor of all the Joys on Cape Cod."

3. DAVID<sup>3</sup> (Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Peter<sup>1</sup>), b. Dartmouth, Mass., 1707 or 1708; d. Nantucket, Sept. 1, 1787, æt. 80. Carpenter.
Married, I, 1727, Mary Taber, of Dartmouth. II, about 1735, Sarah, dau. Solomon and Anna Gardner, of Nantucket.

CHILDREN.

- Mary, b. 1731; m. Reuben Coffin.
4 Reuben, b. 1736; m. Anna Way; d. 1782.
5 Francis, b. 1739; m., 1, Phebe Folger; 2, E. B. Barnard; d. 1822.
6 David, b. 1743; m., 1, Phebe Coffin; 2, Phebe C. Meader; d. 1818.
Anna, b. 1745; m. Chr. Folger; d. 1796.
Sarah, b. 1749; m. Jonathan Barnard; d. 1791.
Peter, b. —; d. unm.
4. REUBEN<sup>4</sup> (David,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Peter<sup>1</sup>), b. Nantucket, Oct. 22, 1736; d. Dec. 31, 1782.
Married, Anna, dau. John and Mary (Long) Way (b. Oct., 1737; d. May 2, 1812).

CHILDREN.

- 7 Peter, b. 1757; m. Phebe Coleman; d. 1824.
Mary, b. 1760; m. Tristram Folger; d. 1844.
Anna, b. 1762; m. Abr. Peacock, of New York; d. 1818.
Merib, b. 1764; unm.; d. 1815.

(b) THE MAINE FAMILIES.

(BIDDEFORD—ELLSWORTH.)

The numerous Joy families residing in the vicinity of Saco-Biddeford, Me., and Ellsworth, Me., trace their descent from one Benjamin Joy and wife Elizabeth, who were admitted to the church at Biddeford in 1741. Rebecca Joy, b. 1805, is authority for the family tradition that his father, the "first Benjamin," came from England to Boston before 1700 as master of the ship Good Hope, and kept a store and sail loft there before removing to "Casco Bay." There is record of a payment made to Benjamin Joy for "making nails, etc.," for repairs on the "Truck House" on Saco River in September, 1730. It has been suggested with some plausibility that this branch is an offshoot of the stock of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> either directly from a son or grandson in Massachusetts, or through a son of Ephraim,<sup>2</sup> of Berwick, Me. The following fragmentary record of these families has been pieced out from the article in the Maine Historical Magazine, Vol. IX (1894), pp. 88, 89, and from information privately furnished.

1. BENJAMIN<sup>2</sup> (—<sup>1</sup>), lived at Biddeford after 1741, when his wife was admitted to the church.

THE GOULDSBORO GROUP.

In eastern Maine, about Gouldsboro, are several families which claim descent from one Samuel Joy, millwright, said to be of Scotch-Irish stock, who went from the Kennebec region, near Augusta, before the Revolution and settled at Gouldsboro. The name "Ivory" which is a favorite in this family strongly points to a connection with the Biddeford-Saco group.

A rough sketch of this branch is given:

SAMUEL<sup>3</sup> (perhaps son of Benjamin,<sup>2</sup> of Biddeford, Me.), who was bapt. 1757. Millwright on the Kennebec, settled at Gouldsboro before 1776.

Married Abigail Tracy ("Abba W. Samuel Joy, d. Steuben, Me., Aug., 1834, aged 80").

Hollis, had Julia, Martha, Isaac P., Charles, Sophia, Mark, Jordan, and Zenos.

(c) A PENNSYLVANIA FAMILY.

EDWARD JOY, said to be from Ireland, settled in Washington Co., Penn., near the close of the 18th century. His two sons, William and James, have descendants in Penn. and Iowa. (Information supplied by John H. Joy, Philadelphia.)

(d) A DELAWARE FAMILY.

EDWARD JOY came from Ireland, near Dublin, in 1727, and settled in Delaware. He had two sons, John and Josiah, and daughter, Ann. Had descendants living in Delaware in 1850. (See correspondence of the late A. K. P. Joy in possession of Hon. Fred Joy, of Boston.)

(e) A WASHINGTON, D. C., FAMILY.

ABSALOM JOY, architect, who lived in Washington in the first third of the 19th century, was son of Capt. Daniel Joy, a shipmaster who came from Ireland before 1775 and settled in Philadelphia. His wife was a Miss McElroy, of Dublin (or Londonderry). He was inspector of ordnance for the Continental Congress during the Revolution. His son Daniel, Jr. (seven years old), was abducted from the streets of Philadelphia, and never heard from.

(f) A SOUTH CAROLINA FAMILY.

WILLIAM JOYE, with a brother who died unmarried, came from England to Charleston, S. C., about 1750. He married Jane, daughter of Gen. Humphries, and had Daniel, William, and Charlotte. Daniel's descendants resided in Charleston in 1853. (See letter to A. K. P. Joy in papers of Hon. Fred Joy, Boston.)

(g) A NEW YORK FAMILY.

ALBERTUS JOY, said to have come from England as a boy, settled in Ulster Co., N. Y. He married Jeannette Post, and their first child was born 1774. Their descendants have spread from Ulster Co. (Letter of Clarence E. Joy, of New York city, to Editor.) An Albartus Joy is on the Revolutionary rolls of the State of New York.

(h) A MARYLAND FAMILY.

Several Joy brothers from the old country came to Baltimore before 1776. One of them settled in Virginia (a Richard was pensioner there in 1818). Another, said to be Peter, removed to Ohio by way of western Pennsylvania. He was a farmer. Of his three sons William died childless, James settled in Indiana, and John (born 1780) lived in Morgan Co., O. John had three sons, of whom James has many descendants in Belmont Co., O., and in Missouri. The town of Joy, in that county, was named for this family. (Letter of Lewis L. Joy, Joy, O., to the Editor, 1896.)

Edward W. Joy, of Savannah, Mo. (aged about 70 in 1896), states that his father, Absalom, was son of John, mentioned above. He thinks John was son of Robert (not Peter!), who with brothers James and John came to Baltimore from Ireland. He says that John, son of Robert, was born in Maryland, lived on the Ohio River near Wheeling, W. Va., where Absalom was born in a blockhouse, 1802.
